HUNT BEATS BADGER AND BROWN

Doubles Today at 4:30 Promise to be Most Interesting Match Yet Played in Tournament.

At 4:30 o'clock today a tennis match that promises to outshine any preceding effort is scheduled, and the turn for the cooler in the weather is expected to make it a great go. On one side are the Salsbury brothers, both of them brilliant players, and as evenly equal in ability as two players may become, and on the other side are Brown and Neel, one the premier local player, and the other a visitor from whom much is expected. The play promises to be hard and of the highest standard right from the first, with an advantage of the side of the Salsbury brothers in that each of them knows the other's play, both are accustomed to teaming.

This contest takes on additional interest from the fact that so far the visiting experts have made rather easy work of the local men, and the victory will either confirm the growing opinion that Salt Lake has something yet to learn, or will help to break it up.

The play yesterday, the feature was the deadly work of Champion Hunt of the Pacific coast, against the strongest local player, Neel. Hunt took a simple one, two series to put both Badger and Brown out of play, but to the surprise of many local players, proved some of a match for Neel, while Brown received an absolute shut out. In the first set, Neel seemed to have things his own way, and took five before Hunt got his first. That ended it, however, as Hunt ran right through to second, and then to the second set with an allowance of only one to Badger.

Neel did not play poor ball, but his style of return was just what Hunt was looking for, and he had easy work of doing it back.

It now looks as though the finals would be run off on schedule time as the preliminaries are coming through in regular order.
