Crude oil distallate, boiling between 85 and 30 degrees C., is the volatile solvent chesten by Barnch, it having the import-ant advantages of cheapness, absolute non-miscibility with water, through dis-solving qualities and a low boiling point. The apparatus he has designed has the two important features of cheapness and simplicity. It is practically a large Soxh-let extractor, in which the raw wool is soaked in the solvent until all fat is re-moved. The machine works automatical-by, the heat of evaporation carrying the moved. The machine works automatical-ly, the heat of evaporation carrying the distillate to a point where it can be al-lowed to flow back by gravity to the ex-tractor and thus be used over again. In consequence, from the labor standpoint, the only effort that is required is in charging the wool into its cage and in manipulating a few valves.

NG NEWS: BALUMBAL ocnts per pound. It is made: First, in the cost of the soap, with which this pro-cess dispenses entirely; second, in a great-er yield of the wool fiber, since none of it is dissolved by soap and alkall, as in the old methods: third, in the superior soft-mass and appearance of the finished pro-duct: fourth, in the wool-fat and the pot-ash recovered. It is this great saving of hitherto weated products that is the strong point in Barnch's invention. In regard to this maiter he says: "The cost of the degrensing operation, including labor, solvent power, interest, etc., would be more than covered by the soap saved. Moreover, it might be well to call attention to the fact that out of such wools as are worked in the United States an average of 15 per cent of the fat can be recovered by the solvent pro-cess, which, at a minimum price of 3 cents per pound, would bring 45 cents for every 100 pounds of wool degreased; and if to this is added the value of the car-bonate of potash recovered from the fins-ing waters, which on an average would amount to 25 cents net per 100 pounds of raw wool, or seven-tenths of a cent per products recovered from every 100 pounds of raw wool, or seven-tents of a cent per pound of raw wool fat and potash are run down the streams and wasted an-nually in the United States alone. If this wool fat, instead of being wasted, was re-covered and refined and separated into its constituent parts, its value would in-crease at least fivefold, and its uses would be sure to multiply."-S. F. Chronicle.

THE ADVANTAGES OF BEING FIFTY

Today the most influential factors in social life are the women of 50 and over.

They are not always the leaders of the great world who are most in evidence; but it is thier feats which count. They give the cachet, the final fillip, to any entertainment.

For a woman to be a real power in the social world requires a more com-prehensive range of gifts than in almost any other field. She must tactician, a diplomat, a quick judge of human nature, a faultless organizer-"Mme, La Resource" at every point. At the present time, the professional woman of 50, at the very zenith of her powers, is stretching out eager hands to the future. She does not sit down and rust, but looks well after her tal-
