THE FAR NORTH.

SWEDEN.

The socialists of Stockholm have now purchased their own printing office.

Five members of the lower house of the Riksdag, Messrs P. Waldenstrom, E. J. Ekman, J. A. Westberg, J. M. Erikson and L. Dahlstedt, have issued a circular, in which they declare that the union between Sweden and Norway, which has now existed nearly eighty years, is in danger of being dissolved, something that, should it happen, would be of great danger to the two nationalities. "By that reason," write the five congressmen, "we take the liberty to ask the men and the women of Sweden and Norway, who believe in Jesus Christ, to harmoniously bring forth this matter in a prayer to the Lord next Sunday."

Several of the Good Templars of Filipstad have been "accused" because it has been proven that they owned shares in the whisky company of the city.

The whisky distillers of Sweden have taken steps to form a trust in order to limit the production in the future.

"The Swedish National Society" is the name of a recently organized union, the aim of which is to arouse and strengthen the patriotism of the Swedish people, and act as a counterbalance to the work of dissolving the society and its foundations, which has taken place in Sweden since some time back. Some of the most prominent men of Sweden are members of the union.

Dr. Ferdinand Samuel, of Stockholm, has been appointed assistant professor at the university of Jena, Germany.

The liberal members of the Riksdag have made an attempt to extend the right to vote at local elections. The lower house passed a bill, which provides that no single man shall cast more than 1-20th of the entire vote in a rural district. But at the same time the upper house rejected a bill putting 1-5th instead of 1-20th. No other country in the civilized world with the exception of Mecklenburg Schwerin, gives the poorer classes so little influence on the local government in the country districts as Sweden does.

The shoemakers of Stockholm have struck for higher wages.

Count Carl Snoilsky, the famous poet, has been appointed an honorary doctor of philosophy by the university of Upsala.

August Strindberg, the greatest Swedish author now living, has again ventured to try the success or failure of marriage. The wedding took place on the island of Heligoland. Strindberg's wife is Miss Frieda Uhl, a woman of literary taste and a daughter of Editor Uhl, publisher of the Wiener Amtliche Zeitung.

The crown prince has left Rome for Karlsruhe, for which city her children, the princes Gustaf Adolf and Wilhelm, accompanied by Court Chamberlain Lilliehoek and Dr. Svedelius, their teacher, also departed.

NORWAY.

The crown prince has left Christiania, but the king is yet staying there. The Norwegian crisis is far from passed, and the personal presence of Oscar is without doubt necessary, in order to hinder the majority of the left from "running amuck," as a paper expresses itself.

The Trondhjem labor union celebrated the 17 of May by a demonstration in favor of universal municipal suffrage.

The Norwegian Tourist club has elected three new guides, making the total number for the season twenty-one. The annual expenses of the club are between $3,000 and $4,000.

The exhibition of the Viking ship at different points between Christiania and Bergen netted a very handsome sum; at the latter place the ship was visited by 8,000 persons in a few hours.

The deposits of twenty-six of the largest private savings banks of Norway, January 1st, amounted to $38,000,000, which is about $2,600,000 more than the year previous. The paid up capital stock was $4,000,000.
