DESERETEVENING NEWS | M'MILLAN BILL PASSES SENATE,

After a Warm Debate Extending Over Two and a Half Hours.

ALLISON LEADS OPPOSITION

Some Senators Supported the Bill Out of Deterence to the Wishes of Their Constituents.

The McMillan anti-compulsory vaccination bill passed the Senate yesterday afternoon with a vote of 13 to 5, after an earnest discussion that was extended over two and a half hours. So far as is known, however, there was not an opinion changed or a conviction altered by the appeals that were made. It may be said in justice to some of the members who supported the bill, that they personally expressed a faith in the efficacy of vaccination, but felt bound to support the measure in deference to the wishes of their constituencies. The most able champion of the opposition was Senator Allison, part of whose argumeo appeared in last evening's 'News." He contended fervently that the passing of the bill might result in the members of the health board resigning, "then what would your wives and children do?" exclaimed the Senator. What means would be in your hands to prevent the spread of the contagion. Senator Thomas suggested that it would be a good thing perhaps if the members of the board would resign. "What would you do then" asked Senator Allison, "give the power to the lo-cal health boards? I have heard that argued, but it isn't worth anything.

While the board of health in one local-the next district might be lax and ne matter becomes a farce." Senator Allison said that he suffered from the smallpox when a lad and that he was deprived of his liberty, more than he would have been had he been subjected to vaccination. He expressed the firm belief that vaccination was the firm belief that vaccinent officacious, that the sentiment State in regard to it was misdirected and that the measure should not pass.

ty might enforce vaccination the board

TANNER NOT CONVINCED.

Senator Tanner said that he would upport the bill because he was not yet nverted to the efficacy of vaccination Furthermore the board of health had exceeded the power intended to be given it by the last Legislature. The majority of the people of the State felt that vaccination was not a good thing.
The board of health, while being stringent in its efforts to vaccinate the school children, was very careless in regard to quarantine. He had met man on one of the main streets of this city in whose family there was smallpox and yet the house was not quarantined. The McMillan bill is only expressing what was designed to be expressed two years ago, but the board of health had taken advantage of a technicality. taken advantage of a technicality. He thought that the people of this State would revolt against the rule of the health board if the pending measure did not pass. The people are demanding the passage of the bill and under the circumstances he said it was the duty of the Senate to pass it.

Senator Bennion also expressed some skepticism as to the virtues of vaccina-tion. He also believed that the State poard of health had been unwise in the way it had gone about to accomplish If vaccination be made compulsory it should apply to everybody, and be made a condition precedent to entering places of amusement such as theaters, dances and any public gath-

HIS PEOPLE WISH IT.

Senator Smoot said that his people were opposed to compulsory vaccination and yet they could pass as intelligently on any public measure as any people They desired him to support anywhere. They desired him to support the McMillan bill and he proposed to do

Senator Murdock thought that if vaccination is enforced it ought to begin with the Governor and then the Senate, starting at the head and going to the feet. "Would you support such a measure?"

asked Allison.
"Personally I would be in favor of just such a measure," replied Murdock, "but two-thirds of my constituents are opposed to compulsory vaccination and I am here to represent them."

In the meantime Senator Allison had been exercising his grey matter with the result that he had the following amendment to make in the title of the bill, "An act to promote the spread of contagious diseases." Kiesel seconded it, but when it was put to a vote Allin's lone treble voice was heard in the affirmative.

THOMAS GIVES REASONS.

Senator Thomas said that he had been opposed to vaccination for twenty years, and that opposition had come about through observation and study. He read from an eminent English hysician who invelghed against vaccination in strong terms

Senator Love said that he believed in the efficacy of vaccination, his con-stituents wished him to support the bill and he would therefore do so. Senator Barnes and Larson spoke in favor of the bill, deeming it their duty to carry out the wishes of their constituents.

WHITNEY SUPPORTS BILL Senator Whitney said that he would take for his text of a very brief dis-course, "I came not to do my will but those who sent me.' He couldn't see why the Senator from Weber (Allison) could believe in im-munity when he had had smallpox when a boy and had broken out two or three times during the session. He ther said that some arguments are best answered by silence. He then referred to Thomas Carlyle's beautiful iribute to silence, and commended it to the junior senator from Weber along with the Swiss proverb, "Speech is silver, but silvere is golden."

I support this measure," concluded Senator Whitney, "because my constitu-ents wish me to, not because I am a foe to vaccipation or an enemy of the health board.

Senator Alder was unqualifiedly in favor of vaccination. He thought that it was the greatest protective measure known to medical science. He said that the children of Utah were the most precious of all the State's possessions, and he honored the health officers for loing all they could to protect them from the pestilence.
Senator Allison had the last inning.

and in reply to Senator Whitney, he said, that he hed not read the particular passages of Carlyle referred to by the senator, but he had read the story of senator, but he had read the story of Don Quixote, and he remembered that Don Quixote rode a horse at the head of the procession and Sancho Panza rode an ass at the rear. "Now I would rather be on a horse leading the procession, than like Sancho Panza, riding

A deeper interest in constantly awaksning in this singing class as the little folks themselves are getting interested. It is an inspiration to see the compactiy filled Choir hall when they are at work. (

The red ticket is the yearly class admission ticket, and will entitle the holder to every privilege of the class. Cor certs, excursions, as well as rehearsale and lessons, under the auspices of the class, for one year from the date of the late they join if they did not join a first (so every week that goes by befor your children join is your, or their, loss). There will be a reaction, as in the public schools. Though it is expected that a couple of grand excur-sions will be taken, and rehearsals held to prepare for a musical program for the same, during the summer months. The blue tickets, four of which have been given every child on payment of one dollar yearly tuition, should e carefully kept until such time as W shall give a "grand class concert the Tabernacie for which they may be sold at 25 cents each, at any time un til the day of performance. But none must be sold on the streets or at the gates or on the grounds on the night of perforamnce. What is sold here of perforamnce. What is sold here must go to the "Tabernacle choir fund," and will be a different ticket. This is partly so that the little singers will not be interfered with in their work at and or the performance on that day public will be warned against buying any excepting at the box office so let them be bought from the children be-fore the night of performance, and the $1 paid for tuition will be refunded in Children are in honor bound this way. not to sell them for less than regular price, as that will work injury to one mother, and the class. Of course pa rents desiring to use them without pay-ing their children for them can do so. But they wrong the class and its indi-vidual members by underselling. And my one found doing so will not be re admitted into the class. The time for this concert is not yet set, but will be at such a time as will be deemed best for the present and future good of the class, only within the school year, and will be a fine concert, and not a class xhibition in any sens

The first class of 400 members will be prepared to take up the study of read-ing music immediately after the Sousa concert, and parents must see that they are supplied with readers-costing 50 cents, or they will have to be put back into the second class where the preparatory training is attended to until they have the book from which to study. After the coming week the division will be made, and class No. 2 will meet at 12:30 Saturdays, class No. 1 at 2:15—about the same as now—only they must not come before 2 p. m. and disturb the other class. Class No. 2 will begin reading as soon as possible, and if they can get ahead of class No. 1, will become the "first class." There will not be more than three weeks difference in the course of the first. I hope to have three classes ere long, then I will have the boys in a class by
