

JEWISH EAST AFRICA.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL TALKS ABOUT THE LAND WHICH GREAT BRITAIN HAS GIVEN HIS PEOPLE.

(Special Correspondence of the Deseret News by Frank G. Carpenter.)

NEW YORK—It was in his apartments at the Sherwood Studios that I chatted with Mr. Israel Zangwill about the Zionist movement and the new Jewish state, which is to be built up in the highlands of East Africa.

Mr. Zangwill has come here from London to push forward this project, and at the same time to watch the American stage. His "Children of the Ghetto" is now being acted in Yiddish in Brooklyn, and Cecilia Loftus is starring the country with his new comedy, entitled "The Semi-comic Governor." He has sold another comedy since he came here, and is well satisfied with his success in these respects. He tells me, however, that he hopes some day to write a drama of a higher nature than anything he has yet produced—a great drama with Jews as the background and the principal characters. The novelist has his serious as well as his humorous side, and this is especially shown in his work for his people in forwarding the interests of the Jewish East African state.

HOW ZANGWILL TALKS.

Before I reproduce our conversation let me take my pen and paint an ink sketch of the man as I saw him this morning. We sat amid silent surroundings. Pointing to the floor I looked down upon from the walls of the studio, which is Mr. Zangwill's temporary apartment, a sullen-faced camel which might have been one or those which brought the wise men from the far east to Bethlehem, scowled at me out of an easel at my right, and anguill, as he lay upon a divan of old Turkish rugs, lacked only a turban and gown or a cap and Jewish gabardine to make him harmonize with the scene. As I looked at him I remarked his pronounced Jewish features, his dark complexion, and his nose with its typical Israelitish curve. He has eyes of a liquid brown, curly hair, combed up from a high forehead, and a thin head, in a manner too earnest and nervous perhaps to be in strict accord with the somnolence of the far east. Indeed, when the telephone rang, as it did several times during our conversation, he almost ran to answer it; and his smooth, well-worded sentences were uttered with all the vigor of an up-to-date pushing reformer of the twentieth century.

PALESTINE FOR THE JEWS.

I had asked Mr. Zangwill to tell me something of the Zionist movement, his reply:

"The Zionists are an organization of Jews from all parts of the world, who are working together to bring Palestine back into the hands of our people. The Jews have always had the Palestine we are giving to us. This hope has lasted for more than 2,000 years, and from time to time various projects, based upon it, have been formed to repossess the land. Nearly all of these, however, have been visionary and outside the domain of practical possibility. Many of them have been founded upon the second coming of a Messiah, who should suddenly rise and lead us in some miraculous way back to our mother country. Many Jews hope for this today, and confidently believe it will occur."

"The Zionists also expect to acquire Palestine; but their plans are based upon the methods and means of the time. They are practical in that they expect to obtain it end through modern political means. They want to interest the Jews of the world in this work, and through them the great governments, and in time to be able to purchase Palestine of the sultan of Turkey, or to show him that it is to his advantage that they should have it. In doing so they expect to convince the great powers of the world that such a consummation would not be to the disadvantage of the world at large."

A NEW HOLY LAND.

"What could the Jews do with the country, Mr. Zangwill?"

"They could renovate and develop it. We were once an agricultural and pastoral nation and we could easily become so again. We are a healthy, well developed race, and we hope to establish a Jewish colony made up of our own people where we can govern ourselves in our own way. We should not object to the suzerainty or protection of some power in the sense of being colonially dependent upon it, but we want home rule and a great national land and home of our own."

"Who would go to such a home, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Jews from all parts of the world," was the reply. "There are millions who would leave Russia and go there. There are millions in other parts of Europe, and there are vast numbers right here in the United States. As it happens, no people congest the great cities. It is said there are more in London than there are in Palestine. New York alone has 600,000 of us, and 300,000 Jews are here settled within an area of one square mile. You have the greatest Ghetto the world has ever seen, and you are adding to it annually by about 50,000 immigrants a year. The Jewish charities spend more than a million dollars a year to take care of the poor among these people. What we want is to send them to their own country and to give them a chance to work for themselves. This is a part of the Palestine project, and also a part of the project of the East African state."

GOD HELPS THOSE WHO HELP THEMSELVES.

"But would not such a colony be founded upon charity? Would it not be a colony of paupers, as it were?"

"No, that is what we want to avoid. We want to teach our people to take care of themselves and to be independent. We believe that God helps those who help themselves. This movement is necessarily founded upon the idea of the beginning. But even so the gifts are made as an 'investment.' The money end of the movement is known as the Jewish Colonial Trust, a joint stock company, capitalised at about ten million dollars in five dollar shares. Our stock is by no means all paid in, but a great deal of it has been taken. The money so given has been invested, and we have already declared dividends of 3 per cent to our shareholders. They have invariably refused, however, to take the money, and ask that the dividends be added to the general fund. I know the Jews are looked upon as money worshippers, pure and simple, but this, it seems to me, shows they are something more."

A MOVEMENT OF THE COMMON PEOPLE.

"Where does this money come from, Mr. Zangwill?"

"The movement toward the acquisition of Palestine is being supported by gifts of Jews from all parts of the world. A little of it has come from the rich and prosperous, but the most of it from the poor. Indeed some of our subscriptions are so small that five families have clubbed together to buy one five-dollar share of stock. Many aid by purchasing stamps on the Jewish national fund and adding these to the regular postage of every letter they send out. These stamps cost about a cent each, so that when a man puts on one a letter he is giving 1 cent to the cause."

"But do you expect to buy Palestine with this money?"

"If we could buy it, we would be glad to do so, but its political situation is such that it will probably be impossible to buy it outright. Nevertheless if we could show the sultan that we had an enormous fund of money to develop the country and that we could add to the prosperity of that part of his dominion due to his revenues therefrom he would probably give the land over to the Jews."

From Morocco, Algeria and elsewhere of Africa. The convention was a success and since then annual meetings have been held once a year, from where the Zionists thought it might be well to establish colonies nearby, from where they could move over into Palestine as soon as that country could be acquired. Egypt is, as you know, now a dependency of Great Britain, and it is practically ruled by the British government. You may also know that the sands of the desert will blossom like the rose if they can only have water. Now, we planned to take the peninsula of Sinai, which was the wilderness through which the children of Israel wandered for so long before they came to the promised land, and irrigate it by the waters of the Nile. We were ready to build a canal to the Nile to carry the water there, and the project seemed to be an engineering possibility. When it was brought before the British foreign office, however, and before Lord Cromer, the British administrator of Egypt, it was not seen how the water could be spared and the project fell through."

THE EAST AFRICAN STATE.

"What suggested your settling in East Africa?"

"That originated in the mind of Joseph Chamberlain," replied Mr. Israel Zangwill. "He knew of our movement in favor of Sinai, when he made his trip to Africa, after the Boer war. He saw the barrenness of the peninsula of Sinai as he went through the Suez canal, and later on contrasted it with the great fertility of the highlands of British East Africa, which he visited by means of the Uganda railway. He was so delighted with the latter country that when he returned he advised the sultan of it to be given to the Jews to form a colony there. That suggestion developed into the definite proposition which has now been made to the Zionists."

A WHITE MAN'S COUNTRY.

"Just where and what is this country, Mr. Zangwill?" I asked.

"It lies about 300 miles inland from Mombasa, within 10 miles of the new railroad which has been built from Mombasa to Lake Victoria. That railroad is about 600 miles long, and it goes straight inland from the Indian ocean, opening up some of the most fertile parts of the continent. A few hundred miles from the coast the land rises and this territory which is offered to the Jews is on a plateau which is almost a mile above the sea."

"The territory is larger than your state of Connecticut. It has an area of about 5,000 square miles, and Sir Harry Johnston, who was in charge of the protectorate, describes its soil as wonderful for fruit."

"It is a white man's country. It will grow all kinds of European vegetables, and potatoes raised there are reported up and down the coast of East Africa. Cotton is grown in Uganda, a little further west, and coffee in the lands of the eastward. The country is rich mineral, and wonderfully rich in pasture. It is a land of big game. There are vast herds of antelopes, zebras, gnus and giraffes. There are droves of elephants, and also rhinoceros, lions and leopards. The country has a native population of more than ordinary intelligence, and native labor can be easily obtained. The ordinary man works for from one to three dollars a month, and good servants can be had at a cost of from $3 to $4 per month for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"That amount to $50,000,000. It was left by him to establish colonies and homes for the Jews of the world, and his trustees have attempted to do this by purchasing land and sending poor Jews to South America and elsewhere. Their attempts so far have been failures, and of late they have been applying the income from this vast sum to scattering charities. This is contrary to the idea of Baron De Hirsch, and we hope to be able to direct the fund eventually to a true Zionist movement, and more especially toward the achievement of Palestine. If we could get the sultan to say that he had $50,000,000 back of us, there would be little trouble in getting him to consider our proposition. If we can acquire Palestine, we believe we can make it a prosperous country, and from there we can spread out into ancient Chaldea and other fertile parts of Asia Minor. I should like to see the rich lands along the Tigris and Euphrates worked by our people."

THE JEWS OF THE WORLD.

"How many Jews are there in the world, Mr. Zangwill?"

"There are probably about 11,000,000 or 12,000,000. There are something like 6,000,000 in Russia, about 2,000,000 in Austria-Hungary, 600,000 in Germany, about 200,000 in Great Britain and Ireland and more than 500,000 in the British dominions. Altogether there are about 9,000,000 in Europe and several hundred thousand in Asia and Africa. There are about 80,000 Jews in Palestine and the number is steadily increasing. Many of those who have settled in the Holy Land are tillers of the soil."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."

"What was the project to establish the Jews on the peninsula of Sinai?"

"That was brought forth immediately after these interviews with the sultan."

left the sultan said: "That man Herzl is a good man. As he looks, so is he. I think the Christian might like the Christ. We sometimes call him the Twentieth Century Messiah."

"This work," Mr. Zangwill went on, "was kept up by Herzl for seven years, and all at his own expense. He might have had a salary from the Zionist fund, but would not take it. At the same time he was carrying on his bread and butter work of writing. The result was he overdid and died a few months ago. He left nothing, and we are now taking subscriptions to a fund for his family."

THE SULTAN OFFERS LAND.

"But did Dr. Herzl have no success with the sultan, Mr. Zangwill?"

"Not as to Palestine," was the reply.

"The sultan offered to give him lands about Palestine, where the Jews might settle and form colonies of their own. These lands were not taken, as Dr. Herzl did not want to use anything of the sultan but Palestine itself."