

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The following will be worth seeing at the Centennial or worth where else—Major J. W. Powell, chief of the second division of the Geological Survey of the Territories, has nearly completed in clay, for the Centennial Exhibition, a model of the great cañon of the Colorado, the Yosemite valley and Niagara gorge, upon a scale of one-half an inch to the mile.

It is stated that Australia has made rapid progress in horticulture, and is fairly entitled to be designated the fruit garden of the southern hemisphere. The quantity of tropical fruits produced is enormous, and as a consequence prices are very reasonable. Pineapples are sold at 6d apiece, and grapes at 3d per pound. Oranges are also cheap and of most delicious flavor.

The Sacramento Bee states that G. E. Hersey & Co. have in California a machine for shearing sheep. The apparatus can be run by steam, compressed air or horse-power, and with it four men can shear one thousand sheep per day.

Here is an item of service to iron and steel makers—"In the Harborsburg test of the recently discovered Field's process of converting iron into steel, nine thousand pounds of steel were made in the two furnaces. Nine heats were run, in four of which were produced five hundred pounds of clinker-pig and a like amount of McCormick pig-iron. As soon as this became liquid, chemicals were thrown in to separate the sulphur and phosphorus, and after this another package, which converted the iron into steel in five minutes from the time of the first introduction of the chemicals. The cost of the chemicals is sixty-four cents per ton of steel, while the saving in iron is from four and one-half to seven per cent, while the loss in iron by the Bessemer process is nearly thirty per cent."

M. De La Beche is having a large building erected in France, in which to manufacture his toughened glass, at a cost of $200,000. It has been shown that by this process glass utensils, such as frying-pans, etc., can be made, which can be used on a hot range, and will resist the fire as well as iron or any other metal. Lamp chimneys, and gas burners that will not break, and numerous other articles will be made of the same material.

The vinticulturists of France and Germany try to protect their vines from frost by artificial clouds of smoke. One plan, which has been very successful, consists in carefully mixing gas tar with sawdust and straw and piling this mixture in large heaps in the vineyards. When required for use, smaller heaps are kindled about the vineyard, and these will burn freely in a few hours, and produce a very dense smoke, which decreases the radiation and prevents frost.

WHY SHOULD HE BE RELEASED?

THE U. S. House of Representatives, it appears, has passed a joint resolution to take steps to procure the pardon or release of one E. O. M. Landon, who is confined in an English prison.

As law is generally administered with some regard to justice in England, the presumption is unavoidable that Landon has been found transgressing the laws of that country, and that he has been thrown into prison in consequence, as a punishment due. It is as easy to live within the laws in England as it is in the United States, and there is practically quite as much personal liberty in the latter country for those who are inclined to obey the law as there is in this. But those who are not so minded will find there is much uncertainty, if they transgress the laws of their being judicially punished there in England than in America. Landon must be an American citizen, or there would be no propriety whatever in President Grant acting as a mediator for him. Nor, as it is, does there seem to be much propriety in such mediation. If Landon went to Britain and by his Fenian acts broke the British laws, what could be more just and proper than that he suffer the penalty of those broken laws? He could easily have avoided such penalty by staying at home and minding his own business, or, if he had been minded to go to the British Isles, by minding his own proper business while there. There is no country in the wide world where a man from any country, if he will behave himself with any kind of decency and manifest any kind of respect for the laws of the land, will be more free and let alone more strictly than in Britain. But it appears Landon could not do this. He put his foot within the meshes of the law and he was caught. What can be said but, "Served him right!" It is a pity that, being an American, Landon should be legally punished for committing any crime, or breaking any law. Such demoralizing presumptions cannot be entertained by rational people. It is not customary in Britain for criminals to escape the law's penalty on the various frivolous pretexts which are often sufficient here to practically nullify legal provisions. As to Fenian insurrections, they are not circumstances which the British Government is likely to look upon with any great degree of leniency. The consequences of these insurrections, it is true, would be so serious that undue mercy to the offenders would be gross criminality to the peaceably disposed subjects of the realm. O'Donovan Rossa is reported to have told a San Francisco interviewer recently that among the designs of himself and his Fenian associates was the

THE SOUTHERN DEATH OF A FIGHTER.

On Saturday afternoon, about four o'clock, a freighter, named William Ralph, called at the house of Mr. Wm. St. Perry, who lives about two and a half miles east of Wellsville, and inquired of him where a man named Soliman Warner lived. After having been shown Ralph left, and proceeded about half a mile, and turned out his team, and camped for the evening. Shortly after he went in where Mr. Warner was plowing, with Ralph and his light acquaintance. Ralph remained there about 40 minutes in conversation, and intimated to Warner that he would come and stay with him all night, which was agreeable to Warner. Upon taking his departure Ralph looked at his watch and remarked that it was five o'clock.

A short time after this, a young man named Andrew Peterson, who was accompanying Ralph to Montana, called on him back at the house of Mr. St. Perry, and wished him to go to the wagon with him. Mr. Ralph, when sitting upon the wagon tongue smoking, had fallen to the ground in a faint. He hurriedly went to the wagon, and found Ralph lying on the ground, lifeless. Mr. Perry raised Ralph up and did all in his power to restore life. In the mean time the young man Peterson went to the residence of Mr. Warner, and informed him of the condition of Mr. Ralph. Soliman Warner, and his brother Amos mounted a horse each, and they were in the act of unhitching and went with all haste, taking with them some alcohol and other stimulants. Upon arriving at the wagon, they found Ralph in the arms of Mr. Perry. They immediately commenced rubbing him with the stimulants, but to no effect.

Upon consultation they concluded to take the deceased to Warner's residence. As they were somewhat acquainted with deceased, they felt under obligations to take care of him, which they did. At the time the body was taken away, Mr. H. Perry started for Logan, a distance of six or seven miles, after O. C. Ormsby, M. D. About ten p. m. they returned to the house of Warner. Upon examining the body the doctor found him lifeless.

On Sunday morning the coroner, accompanied by the sheriff, A. Crockett, went after the dead body, bringing with them all his effects. The body was placed in a back apartment of the Court House. Jurors were summoned immediately, who in connection with the coroner examined the body and afterward adjourned till Monday forenoon at 10 a. m., to hold the inquest, at which time the witnesses summoned would arrive.

A close examination was held upon the deceased, which resulted in the coroner and jury ordering a post-mortem examination. The services of O. C. Ormsby, M. D., and H. J. Richards, M. D., were engaged, who at once held an examination, and found evidence of the cause of the death of the deceased, as will be found in the following certificate.

The deceased is supposed to be from Milroy, Canada, but no positive testimony was elicited touching that matter. He had spent the past winter in the vicinity of Wellsville, Rock-Elder County, in which neighborhood he was favorably known, though not intimately, and is spoken of as a stranger here. He was a gentleman, was about 30 years of age, stout built, and had the appearance of a well-to-do man, had dark hair and complexion.

Deceased was buried in Logan Cemetery, in a respectable manner, on Monday evening.

Every effort will be made to ascertain the whereabouts of his relatives. Meanwhile his property and effects will be held in custody of the county authorities.

Yours respectfully,
J. A. LEBLANC.
