THE WOLF OF A WOOD.

(CONCLUDED.)

Of course there was a seven days' wonder at the village, when the identity of Millburn's burglar and the Sheriff's desperado was traced out, and the fame of his operations spread throughout the region thereabouts. Matrons used him as a bugbear to frighten unruly urchins into obedience; but the affair gradually came to be forgotten, and has now passed from the memory of all but the oldest inhabitants. Just then I thought it best to seek my fortune in the West somewhat sooner than I had originally intended, and many wondered what could have put it into the head of "Young Laurel" to leave so suddenly—a mystery that has remained a mystery to this present writing.

Five years thereafter, I returned, with my manhood matured, and what was more, a large farm and a competence in Illinois. Either my manhood, or my competence, or both combined, overcame Millburn's objections to my suit, and Milly and I were married.

I wanted to close with a nice little bit of sentiment, and say that we have ever since been "Two souls with but a single thought, Two hearts that beat as one."

But my regard for truth compels me to forego that pleasant but a confession that in one thing we are divided. Milly persists in the belief that my concealing myself in that closet was a wise thing, and I'll be hanged if I can "see it in that light."—Miles Laurel in S. F. Call.

Blackmailing.

The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes:

The other morning one of our wealthiest bankers, as he was sitting down to the breakfast table, was told that a lady wished to see him in the reception room. He went in and found a middle aged woman standing in the middle of the room. "I want," she said, "a thousand dollars in money, and I want it now. I want my wife to place in your banking house for my nephew, worth $2,500 a year. I shall give you neither," was the reply. "Then I'll come down to your banking house and denounce you, and I will also denounce you to your wife." The banker rang his bell, and as the servant appeared he said: "Ask my wife to step in here, and send the coachman." They both appeared about the same time. The coachman was ordered to go for the police. To his wife the gentleman said: "You have often heard of a blackmail, I want you to look at one."

The word police was enough for the visitor, and she hurried out without standing upon the order of her going. A young but very successful banker on the street was visited by an exquisitely dressed woman who stepped out of a coup very daintily and did, what she intended to do, attract general attention. She inquired for the head of the house, and was conducted to a gentleman sitting at his desk in the midst of his clerks. She desired a private interview. It was declined on the ground that all business transacted in the office was public. "You can say what you have to say," said the gentleman, "in the presence of all who are here." The woman proceeded to the desk with the reasons why it would not be proper to do that. Before she had finished a gentleman in blue tailed her on the shoulder and told her to accompany him to the Tomb.

Lions and Lion-Taming.

The process of lion-taming is elaborately described by a writer in the London Daily News, part of whose story we copy:

Whatever is the reason, the forest lion is more intelligent than the lion that those begin by taming. The lion-tamer begins by taking the feeding of them into his own hands, and so gets them to know him. He commences feeding them from the outside of the den, then ventures inside of one at a time, always carefully keeping his face to the animal and avoiding any violence, which is a mistake whenever it can be avoided, as it causes the dominant devil in the beast. Getting to handle the lion, the tamer begins by stroking him down the back, gradually working up to the head, which he begins to touch, and the lion, which, like the cat, loves friction, begins to rub his head against the hand. When this familiarity is well established, a board is heaped to the trainer, which he places across the den, and teaches the lion to jump over it, using a whip with a thong, but not for the purpose of punishment.

Gradually this board is heightened, the lion jumping over it at every stage, and then comes the hoops, etc., held on top of the board, to quicken the beast's understanding. To teach the animal to jump over the trainer, the latter stoops alongside the board, so that when the lion clears one he clears the other, and half a dozen lessons are ordinarily about sufficient to teach this. To get a lion to lie down and allow the tamer to stand on him is more difficult. It is done by flicking the back over the tamer with a small "tickling" whip, and at the same time pressing him down with one hand. By raising his head and taking hold of the nostril with the right hand, and the under lip and lower jaw with the left, the lion, by this great pressure on the nostril and lip, loses greatly the power of his jaws, so that he can pull them open and put his head inside the tamer's mouth, the feat with which Van Amburg's name was so much associated. The only danger is that the animal should raise one of his fore paws and stick his talons in, and if he does, the tamer must stand fast for his life until he has shifted the paw.

A teacher in a Sunday school gave out the word "charlatan" in the spelling exercise, and then asked one of the pupils to give the definition of the word. The feeling of the teacher when he asked, "Doesn't it mean a first-class chess player?"

At Foxton, England, there died at an advanced age, William Chapman, a miserable miser, worth £5,000, which he has left to an illegitimate son of his. His last wish was that his stick might be placed in his coffin, that he might give "Old Stratford a thrashing with it when he met him, because he disappointed him of buying some land years ago."

The Singer Manufacturing Company,

Received the Great Award of the Highest class and have left all rivals far behind them, for they

Sold in 1870 127,933 Machines!

SEWING MACHINE SALES FOR 1870.

The magnitude to which the manufacture of Sewing Machines has attained is shown by the "GLOBE" returns (to which any one can have access) of the manufacturers for the year 1870 to the owners of the leading patents, on which they pay a royalty. According to these returns the number of machines sold by each manufacturer in 1870 is as follows:

The Singer	127,933	Flint	17,000
Wheeler & Wilson	75,000	Gold Medal	8,000
Howe	75,000	Kimble	5,000
Greaves & Baker	25,000	Kimble	5,000
Wood	25,000	Pinkie & Lyon	5,000
Willcox & Gibbs	25,000	Parsons	5,000
American Buttonhole	15,000	Wilson	5,000

It will be seen by this table that the popularity of the Singer Machine far exceeds that of all others, their sale being one-half greater than even that of the famous "Wheeler & Wilson" machine. This is owing to the fact that the Singer Company have lately commenced making besides their well-known and established machines, what is known as their "New Family Machine," which is selling at the rate of nine to one better than their old style. Their total sales for 1870 were 97,000 machines against the 127,933 of 1870, showing an increase of one-half in the latter year.—New York Sun.
