We have it will be brought to the attention of the President and his Cabinet and the leading men of this great nation, that they may see the position in which most arbitrary Interpretations of an unjust enactment have placed usen who are not criminal in their desires or dispositions, and have only been made to appear in that light by measures framed against a part of their religion. _ The question of obedience to God or to man when divine and human laws conflict is an important one, and can only be decided by the individual whose faith and acts springing therefrom are brought to investigation. He must choose for himself. He must take the consequences of disobedience to either. Laws ought not to be enacted which intringe upon perfect religious liberty, when that liberty does not invade the freedom of others or deprive others of rights that are natural by acquired. These men choose to obey God rather than man, and would rather suffer the consequences of alleged infraction of special secular law, framed and interpreted to catch them in their religion, than to disobey Almighty God and risk the eternal penaities for wilful transgression

We believe that every honest and conscientious man would take the same course under similar circumstances. If there is a man in the coun- for their obedience to God when that try, private or official, who would not, he is either a coward or a hypocrite. is one of the singular events of this Before those who, without thinking, remarkable age in this wonderful clamor for "obedience to the law as" so-called "Christian" country. construed by the courts" make any more outcries against these prisoners or the "Mormons" generally, they should understand the situation. Here are men who are convinced beyoud doubt that God has made of them certain requirements. This conviction itas passed beyond the sphere of simple bellef. It is rooted in their hearts as dealy as the sense of existence. A Deseret News law has been framed against this "establishment of their religion and prohubiting the free exercise thereof," That may is so construed as to strike at the essentially religious part of their conduct. The promise they are required to give comprehends an agreethen not to do something which they are under religious obligations to perform. It goes behind the carnal, worldly and social conditions which human laws attempt to regulate, and reaches the domain of the spiritual, shut down on cargo. the acvotional, the eternal. Understand, it is notenough that some of these conscientions menhave endeavored to keep the human law, as they understood it and as every person of ordinary Intelligence understool 3, and at the same time not vio-stool 3, and at the same time not violate their religious obligations. The ed, and at Wolverhampton and other demaulthat is made upon them implies a surrender of their fealty to God. They must utterly repudiate and cast off the wives with whom they have made an eternal, sacred and religious demand and these with other orders have, stimulated iron manufactures contract. -Separation from them in a quite favorably. carnal sense is not sufficient. They must trample upon their solemn vows and the commandments of the Most High God, as well as upon the tender-est feelings of the human heart, and est feelings of the human heart, and wreck for life the happiness of devoted women and dependent ichildren, or be thrust into a loathsome prison. They

them But whatever may be the attitude of the country on this question, the Latter-day Saints, or "Mormons," cannot change their position while they retain their faith and convictions. Sensible people ought to see this, and also that force of any kind must prove powerless to make that change. It never accomplished anything of the kind; it never will. You may shut up every "Mormon" in prison but that will not convert or convince him. It will only confirm his faith, deepen his convictions and strengthen his determination to obey God rather than men. A policy of kindness is much more likely to lead to conditions desired by rational people than any measures of vengeance that can be devised. The reply of the prisoners should convince the thoughtful throughout this great nation, that a great blunder, has been made in the merciless crusade against the "Mormons," that no good against the "Mormons," that no good ladies are permitted to go to balls results will accrue from it, and that a with most delicate parts of their bodies fully exposed, was denounced as continuation of the pressure will perstraining at a gnat and swallowing a petuate the "Mormon" system, arouse camel."
