

GRIDIRON TEAMS MUST ECONOMIZE

Western Coaches Will Have to Hold Down Expenses.

AVERAGES $25,000 A YEAR.

In Certain Seasons Amount Expended is Much Greater—Doing Away With Training Table.

Thousands of dollars expended on it goes to develop a football machine which will work like a delicate mechanism for two 5-minute halves in a given game at the climax of the season this year will mean probably hundreds of dollars, at least as far as the University of Chicago team is concerned. It is a case of "eliminating the expense" this fall.

Chicago has only three games at home this year, and only one of these—the game with the Circular Indiana—from present indications will result in the filling of the Marshall field stands. The contest with Minnesota will be played at Minneapolis, and probably will draw as large a crowd as here. Chicago, but the Chicago-Bluffton Grizzlies, which generally attract a good crowd, will be played at Champaign. Consequently, to pay the accounts balanced at the end of the season, the coach must draw the line somewhere, and he can do so more to his own advantage than by doing away with the most economical plan. Enough surplus must be left over from the football season to tide over ball and track teams through the winter and spring seasons, both teams being heavily in debt.

AVERAGES $25,000 YEAR.

In previous years it has cost the University of Chicago, as it has done Miami, about $25,000 to turn out a first class football team. Expenses can much higher than this amount in certain seasons, but the general average may be around $25,000.

The receipts, of course, have been much greater than this. The surplus has been from $5,000 to $25,000.

These quickly made and quickly spent forwarded to the coaches themselves for use, and they declared such receipts and expenditures of money made the sport gladiatorial and out of place in college. They consequently went to work to do away with possibilities and by doing away with the so-called "unnecessary" expenses and came out successfully, although with much smaller surpluses than ever before.

TRAINING THROWN OUT.

On account of the time consumed in the training table, and the financial heads said from time to time on the score, it was the theory that the athletes eating at the training table should pay just what the food and service cost the management.

The average bill, however, was so small that it could hardly be expected that what he received probably the accounts would have balanced.

However, on the first time the coaches and managers had been face to face with decreased receipts, and several of the western colleges—notably Michigan were in a bad way at the close of the season.

Many of the colleges, however, eliminated the so-called "unnecessary" expenses and came out successfully, although with much smaller surpluses than ever before.
