WASHINGTON.

The Bell Telephone—Bill to Forfeit Lands—Another Deadlock, Etc.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — The Supreme Court of the United States today rendered an opinion in case No. 814, William L. Powell, plaintiff in error, vs. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, commonly known as the oleomargarine case. It brought up for review a judgment of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, sustaining the validity of a statute of that commonwealth making it unlawful for any person to manufacture, sell or offer for sale any butter or cheese or article designed to take the place of these articles produced from any compound other than unadulterated milk or cream. Plaintiff was convicted of a violation of this statute and took an appeal basing it on the ground that the statute was in violation of the 14th amendment to the Constitution and that the article was not prejudicial nor deleterious to the public health. The court holds that it is entirely within the police powers of the state to protect the public health, and that the question whether the manufacture of oleomargarine is or may be conducted in such a way as to involve such danger to the public health as to require the suppression of the business rather than its regulation, are questions of fact and of public policy, which belong to the legislative department to determine. If all that can be said of this legislation is that it is unwise or unnecessarily oppressive, the appeal is to the legislature or to the ballot box, not to the judiciary. The court also says it cannot assent to the argument that if this statute is sustained, then nothing stands in the way of the destruction by the legislative department of the constitutional guarantees of liberty and property. The answer to this argument, it holds, is that the judiciary department is bound not to give effect to statutory enactments that are plainly forbidden by the Constitution. The objection that the statute denies the equal protection of the laws, is also held to be untenable, for the reason that the same penalties and burdens are imposed upon all persons engaged in the same business. The judgment is affirmed. Opinion by Justice Harlan, Justice Field dissenting.

The case of the United States vs. the Bell Telephone Company was advanced on the docket and set for hearing the second day of next term. This is the case brought against the Bell Telephone Company in Ohio by Attorney General Garland and which excited so much interest througaout the country.

A bill, general in its character, forfeiting lands opposite railroad lines not completed within the time specified by law, was agreed to by the House committee on Pacific Railroad today.

Representative Weaver (Iowa) says another deadlock will occur this week if the present one is broken within the next twenty-four hours. He intends to oppose the passage of the Outhwaite Pacific railroad bill by dilatory tactics and says it will likely result in a deadlock of considerable duration, if there is time within which the bill may be taken up.

The House Committee on Invalid Pensions this morning took final action upon the Senate bill known as the "Dependent Pension Bill." A substitute was adopted for the Second Section, which is the principal section of the bill. The substitute provides a pension for all persons who have served in the military or naval service of the United States for any period and who have been honorably discharged and who are now or who may hereafter be suffering from mental or physical disability, not the result of their own vicious habits, which totally disabled them from the performance of manual labor, at the rate per month of one cent for every day's war service. It further provides the same pension for all persons who are 62 years of age or who may hereafter become 62 years of age, for and during their natural lives.

Section 3 was amended so as to provide that when the widow of any person who has served in the war and been honorably discharged, is in a condition of dependence, or is suffering from any disability recognized by the general pension law, or is 62 years of age, she shall be placed upon the pension roll at the rate per month of one cent for every day's war service of her husband.

The fourth section was amended so as to make attorneys' fees for claims filed under the bill, $5 instead of $10.

The element of dependency placed in the Grand Army bill by the Senate was eliminated, so that all soldiers are to be pensioned for their services equally, without regard to their financial condition, and according to the per diem idea.

The amendments were adopted by a strict party vote, the republicans favoring the provisions of the Senate bill, so that the amended bill may be regarded as embodying the democratic policy in the matter of pension legislation.

Dishorned Cattle.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 9.—Thousands of cattle have been dishorned in this section since the outbreak of the craze a few months ago and with but few exceptions the animals have rapidly recovered from the operation. Today, however, news comes that several droves recently dishorned on farms west of here are in a most pitiable and serious condition. Their horns were removed March 1st and their wounds have not yet healed and mortification is reported to have set in, in the flesh of the head. About one hundred animals are thus affected.

A Banquet to Mr. Chamberlain.

LONDON, April 9.—Earl Granville, at a banquet given by the Devonshire Club tonight in honor of Mr. Chamberlain, in proposing the toast of the evening, said he was glad to be able to congratulate Mr. Chamberlain on the result of his mission.

His (Granville's) strongest political conviction had always been the importance of maintaining good relations between Great Britain and America. Although he had been the subject of the strongest attacks for his share of the responsibility of the Alabama settlement he looked back upon its result with the utmost satisfaction. It was certain that if England had broken off the Alabama negotiations, they would not have been assembled there today to congratulate Mr. Chamberlain on having brought his task so nearly to a successful issue. The whole liberal party could, on this occasion, unite in congratulating the conservatives on having adopted a liberal policy of conciliation and friendship toward America.

Chamberlain on rising to reply was loudly cheered. He thanked the company for the warmth of their reception of the toast in his honor, and said he appreciated fully the unique character of the gathering. He was glad to see so many of his old colleagues from whom he had been temporarily dissociated. He gathered from their presence that every Englishman worthy of the name sympathized with the objects of his recent mission. Remarking upon the change of public opinion during the last century, he said it was curious to look back upon the sincere opinions expressed by statesmen and writers at the time of the civil war and to note their fears lest America should become a great and aggressive power, dangerous to the peace of the world. He spoke strongly in favor of the confederation of the colonies, and again expressed the hope that the fisheries treaty would be ratified.

Forty Killed.

LONDON, April 9.—Forty persons were killed and about 500 injured by the tornado at Dacca, India, on Saturday last.

A British Plot.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 9.—An inspired article in the Gajdanine says the Battenberg marriage project is a British plot to secure Prince Alexander's return to Bulgaria, to which Russia ought to reply in the mountains of Afghanistan.

The North Wave.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—W. H. Barnum, chairman of the democratic national committee, was in conference today with the local committee having in charge the preliminary arrangements for the national convention to be held here on June 5th. All matters were freely discussed, and the great north nave of the exposition building was selected as the place to hold the convention.

Bloodshed in Chicago.—An Engineer Fatally Wounded.

CHICAGO, April 9.—At 7 o'clock tonight as a C. B. & Q. engine manned by new men was approaching the city over the Western Indiana track from the southwest at Forty Seventh Street, a crowd threw stones through the cab window. Charles Sommers, one of the crew, drew a revolver and fired into the crowd. He struck James Baylon, a foundryman, in the knee. At Fortieth Street the engine met the same reception from another crowd and Sommers again brought his pistol into use. He fired and the bullet struck Mike Welch, a Wabash engineer, in the groin wounding him fatally. An alarm having been given to the police, the engine was intercepted at Thirty-First Street and Sommers was placed under arrest.

Fatal Accident.

CHICAGO, April 9.—A special to the Inter-Ocean from Carrizo, Arizona, says: Last evening at 8:30 o'clock, as the west-bound freight train on the Atlantic & Pacific road was nearing this place, the engine was derailed and plunged down a steep embankment. Frank Ashton, the fireman, and John Hull, the brakeman, were killed. The engineer jumped and escaped without injury. Ten cars were badly wrecked.

The Pope Thanks the President.

BALTIMORE, April 8.—A special to the Sun from Washington says: Pope Leo has sent a letter to President Cleveland thanking him for the jubilee present of the Constitution. The communication was handed the President by Cardinal Gibbons. The Pope speaks of the great distinction of receiving from the ruler of a free people a gift which he had never expected to be sent him, and expresses his appreciation of the appropriateness of the present. The Pope wishes peace and prosperity, and prays for the American people and the country, the perpetuation of their institutions of liberty and the plenitude of God's favor.

Benson Must Go to Mexico.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court today, decided that George Benson, who swindled the Mexicans out of $20,000 on bogus tickets for the Patti concerts must be surrendered to the Mexican authorities. A stay was granted pending an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

CURSED BY DRINK.

A HEREDITARY TAINT BROUGHT OUT BY A CONVIVIAL HUSBAND.

The following story will doubtless seem to many readers like a revamped work of fiction, filled in with a touch or two of local color, but such is in no sense the case. Every word is based on facts which all too really have occurred. The names of those concerned are withheld solely out of consideration for their many friends. They are well known and come from families which pride themselves on their names and aristocratic lineage.

In one of the little towns which fringe the foothills that lie along the eastern border of the bay there has lived for many years an Episcopal clergyman with his wife and a small family of talented and beautiful daughters. No one would judge from the actions of this quiet, generous and dignified old man that in his youth he had been a devotee at the shrine of Bacchus and had led as a young man the easy, reckless life of a man about town. Such, however, is the fact, known only to those who have followed him from his far Eastern home. He had been more than a mere rollicking Bohemian—he had been almost a drunkard. Family relations and his love for the woman who is now his wife nerved him to struggle with his giant enemy, and at last gave him power to become the victor. He left home associations to come to this State, and here has been reared his family. The girls grew up perfectly innocent of their father's early weaknesses, and unconscious of the appetite for liquor which slept unawakened within them.

The eldest of these daughters grew into a young woman of marked beauty and fascinating manner. She was what was known as a popular girl and moved especially in the "Southern set." One of her suitors was a stockbroker of a distinguished Virginia family, and him she married. He was as much one of the boys as his clerical father-in-law had been in his younger days. He, too, had a terrible passion for drink, but love with him was not so strong as to break the habit. Worse still, by very natural and perhaps unconscious ways, he roused the dormant passion of his young wife. She soon became as fond of strong drink as was her husband. They drank together and debased themselves by going on protracted private sprees. For days at a time they would be shut from the eyes of the world, revelling in the orgies of a domestic debauch. The husband was fond of fishing, and in this sport the wife joined him. Old Izaak Walton, after whom all modern fishers try to pattern, allowed that angling was not the only pleasure of the fisherman's trip. A little bottle often accompanied him, in which he often found that inspiration which made him write so glowingly of the sport. These two fishers, the young married couple, took Walton as their model, and each carried on their excursions a flask which went out full and returned empty. As often as two and three times a week they would take to the hills with rod and line, bent not so much on fishing as on drinking, until the neighbors remarked on "their real love of sport." A child came to this debauched pair, but the mother's heart could not triumph over appetite, and day after day she would leave her young babe at home, lulled to sleep by some opiate drug, while she outdid her husband in his bestiality. The neighbors soon learned that it was not together which took the husband and his wife away so often together, for they were seen late on summer evenings reeling to their homes. At last, for want of a mother's care, the child died. This sobered the wife for a spell, but the reaction came and she was worse than before. Even the husband grew ashamed of her now, for loosing her womanly pride she mingled with the commonest classes to be found in "ladies' sitting-rooms," and was once or twice found in a localized in a place of shady name. The husband became angry, taunted his wife with her loss of womanly beauty and pride and in unmanly fashion accused her of that for which he was so much himself to blame. They quarreled and out of this lucky quarrel came a divorce.

The wife came to this city and lived with her sister, now married, at a fashionable boarding-house on Sutter Street. The husband followed in the downhill path, which was so much the easiest to follow. They saw nothing of one another, and the girl, by this time a woman of 22 years, began to regain social position and womanly self-respect. The married sister kept careful watch over her divorced elder, hardly letting her leave her sight day or night. One day, however, the sister returned home in the evening and failed to find her ward at home. Thinking that, probably she had gone to spend the evening with some friend, she felt easy. Breakfast time came, but the sister did not appear. Just as breakfast was coming to an end in staggered the blear-eyed bedraggled sister, who, leaning on the back of a chair, said that she had gone out in the afternoon for a walk, had met her husband and had yielded to his entreaties to have dinner together. Dinner meant wine, and wine led to something stronger, and "at last" she said, "we went home together, and he is up stairs in my bed now."

Imagine the consternation of that tableful of respectable and proper women! It was not possible for the newly joined couple to remain in that house, so off they went to a suburban town, where for a time they lived over again the sad life of a year before. Before going, however, stirred by a sense of having done something which was contrary to morals and religion, this twain visited a priest to ask his advice in the circumstances, for both are Catholics, the girl having changed her religion with her name. From the priest they learned the consoling fact that in re-plighting their troth they had done no wrong, for the Church had never recognized their divorce, hence they were still man and wife.

Conscience thus calmed they returned to their debaucheles till the heart-broken and gray-haired father by entreaties and prayers moved his daughter to a realization of her position, and then once more the couple parted. This last separation occurred only a few days ago, and now the wife is seeking some newly recognized society and the church by which she may be freed from the curse of her marital ties. She thinks as a last resort of walling herself within the cold uncheerfulness of a convent, but the mother and friends oppose this course and what will become of this unfortunate appetite-haunted girl it is impossible to foretell.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Worth Knowing.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe Cold, attended with a distressing Cough and running into Consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it.—Trial bottle free at W. C. Smith & Co's Drug Store. UTAH BONDS FOR SALE.

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand ($150,000) Dollars, of Five (5) per cent. Utah Territory Bonds for Sale.

THE UNDERSIGNED, IN PURSUANCE of the direction of the Loan Commissioners of the Territory of Utah, hereby advertises that bids will be received at his office in the city of Salt Lake, said Territory, until 12 o'clock noon, of the 31st day of May, 1888, for the purchase of, and at which time a sale of the bonds hereinafter described will be made, namely: One hundred and fifty bonds, each of the denomination of one thousand dollars, of the engraved negotiable compound bonds of said Territory, bearing five per centum interest per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July of each year, at the Deseret National Bank in said City, or at such bank in the City of New York, in the State of New York, as may be designated by said Loan Commissioners, at the option of the purchasers of said bonds.
