DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, April 2, 1909.
 Foreign Literature.

A reviewer of the literary season in this country would not fail to notice that during the last two or three years Americans have turned with their usual eagerness to foreign literature. The notable authors studied in literary clubs have been Robert Browning, Tolstol and Ibsen. The most talked about and probably the wisest and best of the winter has been the "Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff," those frank revelations which the most audacious American could not have imagined or dreamed.

There is a lack of independence, an insufficient variety of local opinion, an indefinable position to discourage or modify individuality in our writing which is detrimental to vigor and diversity. And from other critics come equally positive opinions in regard to the need of more force and distinctness in American literature. In former days, when there were no books worth reading in this country and when our dependence upon Europe was necessary, the need of foreign literary support was not surprising. The attitude at present may be interpreted either as neglect of our own authors or as a sign of cosmopolitanism in literature. It may be regarded as the necessary condition of an internationalism, when the process of assimilation is going on in preparation for a brilliant period of future creation. With few exceptions, the efforts of the younger generation of American authors seem to be tentative, often characterized by a timidity which deserves even the severest criticism of Mr. Lathrop. But these efforts are not restricted to a small circle of writers. Dr. Holman has uttered his protest against the vast quantities of commonplace verse annually issued by small publishers. Magazine editors often give their worried testimony upon the mass of prose issued by apparently unflinching American writers. From this eagerness to produce literature and from the sincere efforts made to develop local peculiarities of custom and dialect, a brilliant future of American literary work may be predicted. The time may come when the study of our authors may be as eagerly pursued by clubs and individuals as that of foreign authors at the present time. American history is a branch of recent popularity; but it may be a forerunner of more enthusiastic appreciation of our literature.—Boston Journal.

The champion hog sticker of the country is probably Julia Wesley Haddell, of Kansas City. He has spent fourteen years as a packing house employee, and regards the killing of 200 hogs a fair day's work. Figuring on this basis, and allowing 100 working days a year, it would appear that during his career Haddell has presided at the obsequies of nearly 20,000 porkers. The largest number ever slain by him in ten consecutive hours was 418. Despite the fact that his hands are daily dyed in blood, Haddell is a mild-mannered man of domestic habits, whose peaceful dreams are never disturbed by the ghosts of his innumerable victims.

FEDERATION OF NATIONS.

"UNITED STATES" THAT HAVE COME INTO EXISTENCE SINCE 1776.

There are some dates called to attention by recent events which are destined to be memorable in different parts of the Western Hemisphere. In 1776 the United States of America were formed. In 1821 the United States of Mexico came into official being. In 1801 the country which had been called New Granada, and had the name of the United States of Columbia. In 1864 Venezuela became the United States of Venezuela. In 1889, just one hundred years after the people of Paris had overthrown the Bastille, the republicans of Brazil abolished the empire, deposed their Emperor Dom Pedro, and with very little violence of any kind, established a republic called the United States of Brazil.

The year 1890 may also be memorable for the federation of the republics of Central America, and their union into a republic which will be called the United States of Central America. A Congress or Diet of the Central American Republics, sitting at the city of San Salvador, has formally signed a Pact of Union—an instrument corresponding with the Articles of Confederation under which the United States of America were first organized—and has submitted this compact to the governments of the five Central American Republics—Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica. This instrument has, we believe, been ratified by three of the States named, Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras, and Costa Rica is supposed to be ready to enter the Union if Nicaragua also will do so. The Congress will assemble in August, 1901 at Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, to choose by lot a president for one year, from among the presidents of the new republic. According to this compact the presidency of the Central American Republic will pass by rotation from State to State, year by year, during ten years; but at the end of that period a constitutional convention will assemble to form, as our constitution did in 1787, a more perfect union.

An American journal, referring to the tendency to federation and consolidation which is one of the features of modern political life, predicts that some day there will be in the Western Hemisphere but two countries, the United States of North America and the United States of South America. This may, indeed, be the case some time in the future, but it is likely to be a somewhat distant future. And yet it is quite possible that it may be realized long before the realization of the event which has been a favorite dream of European republicans—the "United States of Europe."—Tosche's Campanas.

FODDER FOR HORSES.

AN UNDISPUTED PREJUDICE AGAINST IT.—A HORSEMAN'S VIEW.

There seems to be quite a difference of opinion among horsemen as to the value of corn fodder as a food for horses. A leading farm paper recently mentioned its readers' agitation feeding horses on corn-stalks, stating that they would make the horses' coats rough. Mr. C. W. Williams, the breeder and trainer of Axtell, says that his wonderful colts feed on the husks of corn-stalks for rough fodder during nearly two winters. He says that his wonderful colts feed on rough fodder he can get for colts. The writer once worked for a farmer who never cut any hay. His cattle and horses never had any fodder but cured corn-stalks. The animals always look well and the horses did their full share of work. The writer now has two horses that have very little to do and are not heavily fed. One of them prefers corn-stalk to hay, while the other runs down if fed on stalks without hay. It is an old horse and can not handle the stalks as well as a younger horse would. We find that this prejudice against corn stalks for horses is quite common among a class of farmers. Except in the case of old horses with poor teeth, we do not think the prejudice is just. In fact it seems reasonable that a moderate supply of well-cured stalks will prove beneficial to a horse in winter, and even with old horses if the stalks could be cut and moistened with hot water they would prove valuable. A good deal of the objection to stalks for horses may be traced to the fact that the grain of the corn is fed with the stalks. This makes an "ill-balanced" ration. When stalks are fed give only and wheat-bran.
