In Denver.

The Salt Lake delegation to the International Range convention, number over twenty of Zlon's solid business men, are now all in town, the last consignment coming in last evening on the third section of the Salt Lake express, which arrived three thours late. While attending the convention the Salt Lakers will beom Zion, which, 'in consequence of the influx of eastern capital and vigor, has awakened from her forty years' sleep and is rapidly grow-ing. The Utah men are working under the direction of the executive committee consisting of Major W. H. Sells, formerly of Dalias and Fort Worth, Texas; Judge H. H. Benson, formerly of the Iowa bench, and T. A. Wickersham, a prominent business man. These have headquarters at the Markham Hotel; whence will be dispensed a vast amount of Utah literature and potographic views; and the entire delegation, is dividually and collectively, will set forth the Territory's rapidly developing resources in glow fing terms. They have pienty of permanent facts to back their arruments and will no doubt induce a number of visiting capitalists to take in Salt Lake on their way home. And still they come. This time it is Anton Davis, or Jacobsen, a miller, who has for a number of years been employed in Cooper's mill, West Jordan, and who recently came to Salt Lake. Davis has been under treatment at the Sisters' Hospital for some time for a diseased arm, on which an operation was performed about five weeks ago, and which was getting along favorably.

Davis had attempted to destroy his life in the same manner as Willman, who committed suicide on Sunday night. By his side at the square was a syringe, a couple of bottles-one containing a selution of morphis-and some other articles. It was evident that he had administered to himself a hypotermic injection of morphine. He morrow to urge upon Congress the had probably got the idea from learning of Willman's action, as he stood by the doctors on Sunday night when they were working with him. There seem to be no other reasons for the effort at self-murder than Davis' suffering, and perhaps his domestic relations-if such they may be termed. William P. Huff was a very much respected citizen of this valley and lived only a few miles below Boise City many years and is well known in City many years and is well known in this part of Idaho. He moved to Long Valley about a year ago and commenced making a new farm. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his sad death.—Idaho Slatesman.

HOW SIR WALTER SCOTT WROTE.

"IVANHOR" DICTATED FROM A BED OF PAIN-HIS AMANUENSES.

Thackeray says: "Court we know the man's feelings as well as the author's thoughts, how interesting most books would be more interesting than merry." The mood in which Walter Scott wrote "The Bride of Lammermoor" was one of heroic res-olution combating against acute physleaving school by Miss Annie Butler; ical suffering, which seemed so serious as to threaten life itself, while it was so severe and painful that but few would have had determination en ough to carry on through it imaginative literary work. He was compelled to employ the services of amanuenses, and William Laidlaw and John Bal-lantyne wrote to Scott's dictation. Ballantyne was the better amanuen-sis, because Laidlaw was too strongly stirred with admiration and delight, and exclaimed as some fine passage was being dictated to him: "Gude keep us a' |—the like o' that! eh, sirs! eh, sirs!" Scott's disease was called cram, though later the better physicians might have given the complaint another name. The date of the "Bride" was April, 1819. Three novels—"The Bride of Lammermoor," "The Legend of Montrose" and "Ivanhoe"—were thus dictated, but "Ivanhoe"—were thus dictated, but when health returned, Scott resumed his practice of writing with his own hand. Goethe, on the other hand, early employed the assistance of an amanuensis, and continued the practice until the end. Sometimes Laidlaw begged Scott to stop while the poet's audible suffering filled every pause. "Nay, Willie," said the afflicted author from his sofa of pain, "only see that the doors are fast. I would fain keep all the cry as well as all the wool to ourselves, but as to our giving over work, that can only be when I am in woolen." Scott often turned upon the pillow with a groan of anguish, but naually comtinued the sentence in the same breath. When dialogue of peculiar animation was being dictated, he some times got up and walked up and down the room, as it were acting the parts. Such were the feelings and the pains of the man while the heroic author composed "The Bride of Lammermoor," After a closing hymn by the choir, President Cannon pronounced the posed "The Bride of Lammermoor," and Scott assured Ballantyne that when the book was first out of his This report exhibits, in minute de- hands, in complete shape, he did not tail, the statistics of both departments recollect one single incident, character or conversation that it contained.
