died after a short time and an autopsy disclosed a fractured skull and hemorrhage of the brain. The other man, fined to the few favored districts, and arraigned in the court, was committed the Tombs in lieu of a fine. He died three hours later. External ex-amination has led the coroner's physiclan to the belief that this man also died from a brain hemorrhage.

people to purchase it? Certain it is that the publishers of these books have had wonderful "good luck" and will get an more of it if this measure, which is nov before the Legislature becomes a law. Before the Legislature passes any free lextbook law let there first be an adoption of books on an entirely dif-ferent basis to the one made last sum-mer, or otherwise their action will play into the pockets of the book trust and others whose books were adopted. Most assuredly better prices can be procured on schoolbooks if adopted along different lines to those which prevailed over

An agent of one of the publications, some of whose books were placed on the regular list by the convention, said to the writer: "You can get better ices on text books in Utah than you have been getting when you have a different method of adopting them. It wast me alone $1,000 to make a canvass of this state." The statement of this agent shows conclusively in my opin-ion, that the best prices obtainable were not secured and under the cirumstances the people should not be empelled by legislative enactment to neet these unfavorable conditions to direct benefit of the publishers hose books were adopted, and some f whom, I am prepared to say, are acceedingly anxious that this bill should become a law in our state. It is claimed that it will be a great eaving to the people, as the books will be procured at the wholesale price instead of the retail price. Let us, at least, consider, for illustration, one set of books and see how much of a sav-ing there will be. We will take for our example Reed and Kellogg's grad-d and higher lessons in English, the books champloned by Supt. Nelson in the text book convention, and in addtion it may show us how much interest he had in the people when it came to a Ucstion of price on text books. Graded lesson, wholesale price 34, re-

Higher lesson, wholesale price 51, re-

Here we have a difference of 6 cents between the wholesale and the retail price on the first book and 9 cents on second book. Now how much can e saved on these books? Certain it that it acnnot be 6 cents on the one and 9 cents on the other because these sums would be taken up in the expense to the state in handling them, such as unpacking, checking, providing store room for them, care of and freight on same from railroad depots to place of destination. The freight alone, in many cases would be very great as there are over one dozen counties a considerable distance off the line of the railroad
