tion was the work of an incendiary. Several weeks ago Harry Lee and a companion named Snider from American Fork commenced a plan of ex-tortion against J. E. Cotter, the lessee of the creamery and one of the heaviest stockholders. Their story was that Cotter had hired a man toset fire to the creamery, and that this party had divided the price, $150, with G. W. Holman, who assisted in starting the con-flagration. Holman, so the blackmail-ers would have Cotter believe, gave the secret away to Lee and Snider, who claimed that they also had several letters to prove their story. They de-manded that Cotter pay them $200 to keep quiet, or if he failed to do so would let the world know all the facts in the case and place Cotter behind the bars. Cotter, knowing that the scheme of extortion and blackmail had no foundation so far as he was concerned communicated with the officials and arranged another meeting with the two American Fork men. Two witnesses were concealed, and the extortioners

Cotter, after reading the letters, made an excuse to go into the main store, and handed the letters to the two detectives, and madebelieve that he had mislaid them. Snider and Lee by this time had become alarmed, and making an excuse agreed to call again, but were shortly afterwards arrested under the charge of extortion. To protect them-selves they told the officers all they knew of the case and the officers say that the evidence will convict Holman,
