THE ROBBER'S WORK

Holds Up a U. P. Passenger Train.

MADE TRAINMEN ALLIES.

Violent Attempt to Blow Open the Express Safe.

ATTEMPT WITH REGISTERED MAIL.

A Party of Eighteen and Compromised the Express—Robbed the Express—Held Up the Train—Made the Trainmen Allies—Violent Attempt to Blow Open the Express Safe—Attempt with Registered Mail.

Train, a small station on the Union Pacific between Ogden and Salt Lake City, was the scene of an early hour robbery of one of the most daring robberies ever perpetrated in the West.

It appears that the hold-up was the work of one man, single tracked and alone, who by a clever ruse, enlisted the passengers and trainmen into the plot that he had ample assistance in the end that he was making.

The method of operation was as follows: The first man, single tracked and alone, who by a clever ruse, enlisted the passengers and trainmen into the plot that he had ample assistance in the end that he was making.

At this point he commenced the robbery, commanding the trainmen and passengers to throw up their hands, saying that he was about to rob the train.

The robber was dressed in a suit and a hat, and was armed with a revolver. He was about to rob the train.
