After his conviction Bates appealed to the Territorial Supreme court, which affirmed the lower court. In May, 1898, he applied to Judge Marshail of the United States circuit court for a writ of habeas corpus and was released. Bates was subsequently rearrested and on a change of venue was taken to the Fourth judicial district court. A motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, presented by counsel for Bates, was grant-ed by Judge Booth. The State then comnenced mandamus proceedings against the court to compel it to proceed with the trial of Bates. The Supreme court held mandamus was not the proper remedy and the State now seeks the proper remedy by appeal.
