

America wore their beautiful sashes of red, white and black. Following the "regulars" came the Denhalter Rifles, Dyer Rifles, Company A, Second Infantry, University Cadets and the G. A. R. Posts acting as a guard of honor to the hearse and pallbearers. Immediately in the rear of the hearse, and led by Color-Bearer Stern, slowly walked the horse "Buckskin." Its trappings were of a military character, a pair of military boots being suspended from the saddle. Then came carriages, twenty-five in number, containing relatives, friends, invited guests, Territorial and county and city officials. The next division was headed by the First Brigade band, which rendered Mendelssohn's Funeral March, and which acted also as the advance guard of the Knights of Pythias, nearly one hundred strong, and the Patriotic Sons of America. A platoon of police, ten strong, in command of Sergeant Brown, lead the van of the citizens' division. First came the "Liberal" city committee, headed by Judge Powers and C. E. Allen, and next the Liberal drum corps, forty in number. They were followed by the Flambeau Club, Colonel Murray in command, in citizen's clothes. The Hussars, mounted and in uniform, in charge of Major Schultz, followed. Occupying the place of honor were the visiting delegations, Ogden, with its band, in the lead, the members of the various "Liberal" ward clubs bringing up the rear. Held's band headed the last division, which consisted of a platoon of police in citizen's clothes, marshaled by Captain Janny and Sergeant Donovan, and the Irish-American Association (120 strong), which formed the end of the procession.

At Seventh East street the local militia and civic organizations withdrew, having first been drawn up in line and passed under review. Then the cortege slowly wended its way to the reservation cemetery. Outside the low paling which surrounds the plat stood the Sixteenth Infantry with arms at present, and around the grave hundreds of persons had congregated.

Arrived at the place of interment, a dirge was given by the band, after which Post Commander Whitney of the J. B. McKean Post, G. A. R., spoke as follows:

"One by one, as the years roll on, we are called together to fulfil these last sad duties of respect to our comrades of the war. The present, full of the cares and pleasures of civil life, fades away, and we look to the time when, shoulder to shoulder on bloody battlefields, or around the guns of men of war, we fought for our dear old flag. We may indulge the hope that the spirit with which, on land and sea, hardship, privation, dangers were encountered by our dead heroes—a spirit uncomplaining, nobly, manfully obedient to the behests of duty, whereby today our northern homes are secure, and our loved ones rest in peace under theegis of the flag—will prove a glorious incentive to the youth who, in the ages to come, may be called to uphold the destinies of our country. As the years roll on, we, too, shall have fought our battles through and be laid to rest, our souls following the long column to the realms above, as grim death, hour by hour, shall mark its victim. Let us so live that when that time shall come those we leave behind may say above our graves, 'Here lies the body of a true-hearted, brave and earnest defender of the Republic."

Comrade Tatlock, laying a wreath of evergreen on the coffin, said: "In behalf of the Post I give this tribute, a symbol of an undying love for comrades of the war." Beside the wreath was placed a rose by Comrade Haynes, who said: "Symbol of purity. We offer at this lonely grave a rose. May future generations emulate the unselfish devotion of even the lowest of our heroes." Comrade C. O. Farnsworth adding a laurel leaf closed the G. A. R. exercises by saying: "Last token of affection from comrades in arms; we crown these remains with a symbol of victory."

The Rev. Father Kiely recited a few lines in Latin. The casket was then lowered into the grave and at a signal Colonel Rose said: "Fire by battalion! Ready! Aim! Fire!" The firing of the volleys concluded the ceremony.

Delegates were present from Ogden, Park City, Tintic, Provo, and other places, the Ogden delegation (among whom was ex-Mayor Kiesel) being quite numerous.
