

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

(Special Correspondence.)
NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The New York contingent who celebrated the 24th of July at Memorial cottage in South Royalton, Vt., returned Monday evening, filled with enthusiasm over the grand time given them by Julius F. Wells and the people of our northern state. The weather being perfect, there were plenty of outdoor exercises while Sunday services were held in the room where stands the original hearthstone that belonged to the Smith family so many years ago. President Rich organized the Vermont conference with headquarters at Montpelier, John T. Smellie, presiding, with 16 elders in the field. The elders have traveled throughout Vermont for years, as they have through all the eastern states, but President Rich has now established a mission house and traveling elders will have a place to assemble and hold meetings.

On Wednesday evening, President Rich had the entire Brooklyn conference at headquarters for a short meeting and social prior to his departure for the west on the following Saturday evening; he did not expect to return until the end of October. All the musical talent here was taxed for entertainment and a fine program rendered. President Allen and C. E. Dinwoodey will be in charge during the absence of President Rich, whose early departure for his home in the west is due to the big reunion of the Rich family, which will be held in Bear Lake in August. The one hundredth birthday of President Charles C. Rich will be the occasion of one day's festivities and probably the most important day Bear Lake has known for some years.

walk with all its attractions, kept the party busy until time to retrace steps for the homeward journey. No more ideal trip can be taken near New York than this boat ride through the Shrewsbury river and by the Jersey coast. Mrs. Richards is a well known hostess, and her friends are numbered by her acquaintances; everything contributed to make of the day a perfect one.

Mr. Hamilton Park, who has been out in audience for a number of weeks, came in with the company last week and is now taking a rest until Sept. 1, when he will be among the first to start on the road for the autumn and winter.

On Saturday the few who are left here, took advantage of the warm day and went down by boat to Rockaway Beach. Still another purpose led them to that desirable place, as a baptism, that of Mrs. E. C. Gaskins, who has been an investigator for some time, was performed by Elder George Ogden, she was confirmed at today's services. Each Saturday sees a baptism, the one before being Mrs. Belsner at Ocean Side.

At today's services two young elders, Isaac Grow of Huntsville and T. W. Mathews of Idaho, spoke to the people; the former is just returning from a three-year's mission in South Africa, and the latter from a three years' mission in Holland; both young men return in excellent health and spirits.

Mrs. C. M. Morris of Washington, D. C., is visiting relatives in the city, for a few weeks. Mrs. Morris is the wife of Mrs. C. Morris, private secretary to Senator Smoot, and has come up to enjoy our cool weather.

To the many friends of Sallie Fisher in Salt Lake, it will be good news to hear that she is improving, and will be able to resume rehearsals soon.

on the wrist. Quite recently, the writer saw a lady in a Parisian cafe with two tiny tortoises, about an inch and a half long, which she allowed to crawl over the table for the amusement of her friends. She even went the length of ordering some lettuce for her pets.

Probably the most extraordinary living thing that ever was attached to a bangle was a beetle. One lady had such a pet, and it seemed to be quite happy, although it had a tiny gold chain fastened round its neck.

Toy dogs have long held a strong position in the affections of ladies of fashion. Most people will remember the birthday-party given some time ago in New York in honor of a distinguished lady's pet. The dogs were set up at table, on chairs, and were waited on by their owners, who fed them on sausages, salads, veal cutlets, and ice-cream.

Not long after this event there was a similar fete, at which the principal guests were pigs. These animals, for a time, usurped the reign of the toy dog in certain sections of society, the favorite variety being black, and very small.

There is no end to the list of extraordinary animals favored as pets by individuals, but it includes pythons, leopards, armadillos, baby tigers, small lions, owls, rats and mice, and sea anemones.

We must not forget the live "Teddy" bear, nor the lady who, much to the embarrassment of her friends, kept clucking hens in her drawing-room.—London Answers.

MEN'S COLLARS

As well as their shirts should be washed and ironed perfectly especially in the summer. More discomfort is caused from poorly laundered shirts and collars than any other part of the man's apparel—an overly starched shirt, collar with s-w edges, cuffs with soft stiffening—all go to make a man's life miserable. Avoid all these and many other unpleasantnesses by having the Sanitary Laundry handle your washing. Our Wagons Call Everywhere. SANITARY LAUNDRY 39-45 So. W. Temple "IMMACULATE LINEN."

RECEPTION GOWN OF EMBROIDERED CHIFFON.

This handsome empire gown is fashioned of chiffon. Running down the length of the skirt giving a panel effect are three rows of embroidery, separated by dozens of tiny handrun tucks. Elaborate embroidered designs are seen in the sides and back of the skirt, and the same designs are shown near the neck. A hand-tucked vest of the chiffon is edged by heavy embroidery all around the corsage. The long sleeves are fairly tight and made of the tucks and embroidery. Deep tucks run the full circle of the skirt near the hem. The gown is made in touch length, with about three inches of sweep in the back.

Helene Davis, who has been matron of the Blind asylum at Ogden for several years, has moved to Pittsburg to live near her brother and two other sisters, though it was hoped Mrs. Laine would return to New York, her old home, and again become an active member of the Brooklyn conference. Her many friends here will wish Mrs. Laine success and happiness wherever she may elect to live, and will gladly welcome her when she finds her way to New York again.

Richards, who is here visiting for the summer—the excursionists taking the boat from the Battery to Pleasure Bay, thence by trolley through Long Branch, Beach and Allenhurst to Asbury Park. Mrs. Richards presided at a most delightful lunch, after which the famous board

EXTRAORDINARY PETS SOCIETY HAS SUCCEDED TO

WASPS are not creatures which inspire universal love, but at least one lady finds them entertaining as pets.

To tame wasps, according to Miss Black-Hawkins, is quite a simple affair, the principal quality necessary in the operation being determination. If a wasp is buzzing round your cheek, you must not waver or move your head, or the insect, realising that you are afraid, will probably sting you. Miss Black-Hawkins feeds her pets from the hand. After a little dodging, they will allow themselves to be picked up, and one, which was very tame, had the habit of creeping down its mistress' neck, and going to sleep there.

But Miss Black-Hawkins is not by any means the only lady who fancies freak pets.

Most ladies have a horror of spiders, but Mrs. Barker, wife of the dean of Carlisle, is an exception, and is especially fond of these creatures.

About the beginning of this year, Mrs. Barker found one of the insects in a torpid state, in an anteroom at a deanery. Day by day she watched it with delight, and reported progress to her husband. She was greatly pleased when it began to spin its little web.

When Mrs. Barker goes into the deanery gardens, she has only to whistle to bring a host of sparrows, tomtits, and other birds round her, and the dean assures her delight in feeding them. Dr. Barker believes that animals have a future life.

Many of the children of society are at present cultivating as pets such creatures as snakes, tortoises, lizards, and frogs.

Perhaps the only royal lover of snakes is the Baroness von Helldorf. This lady's pets are quite tame, and her extraordinary taste leads her sometimes to appear with one of them round her neck.

Another Royal lady—the Countess of Montignoco—is very fond of lizards. She has some particularly fine American iguanas, which she is said to feed herself, at a cost of 25 a week for vegetables.

Fashion, rather than individual taste, frequently influences the choice of freak pets. Not so very long ago the chameleon was all the rage, and ladies spent a good deal of their time in catching flies for their pets, and watching the disposal of them.

In Paris, at one time, it was the thing to have a small live tortoise slung by a gold chain from a bangle
