AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words, among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvelous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equaled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their painful effects, that is well founded, if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved, by this timely defence. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its early use in sudden attacks.

[From our own Correspondent.]

GERMAN LETTER.

NURNBERG, Germany, April 3, 1882.

Editor Deseret News:

Since my last to you I have braved the perils of the North Sea and the perplexities of a thirty-hour railway journey into the heart of the most lymphatic of countries, by one of the slowest of trains, along with the sleepiest of officials and fellow travelers, among whom I enjoyed the proud distinction of being the only one who could speak English and the only one who could not speak German. The difficulties of the trip, however, were much more than counterbalanced by the pleasures of the sea voyage and the new and strange scenes which from the car window every moment burst upon my view. The usually turbulant German Ocean was smooth as a river, and "all the winds slept soundly;" while on the land the delightful weather of the past few days had rendered the soil in the fittest possible condition for the labors of the husbandman.

HOME OF THE RIP VAN WINKLES.

Broad fields stretched away on every side, green with the sprouting grain or grass, or furrowed with the later presence of the rude but effective plow. I wondered how such progress had been made in the farmer's spring work when I noticed the general air of inactivity that prevailed. Everybody we passed appeared to be afflicted with that form of laziness politely called the "spring fever;" for it seemed to me that at least three-thirds of the laborers I saw were in a state of rest. The little snorter that pulled our train partook of the infection, and took advantage of every village along the line to pant, cool off and regain its breath as it were. At each station the same drowsiness was apparent, and I saw the necessity of the half dozen warnings which are always given before the train starts. From the dandy official in the blue coat and red cap, who is master of the train and all its belongings while it is in his station, to the humbler personage who rings the warning signals on a great bell, and whose badge of servility is a plain blue coat, I failed to see one active wide awake man, scarcely one who had enough life in him to draw the smoke through his huge, long-handled pipe and puff it out of his mouth. Sometimes a red-capped fellow would arouse himself sufficiently to address one of his subordinates, in violent language, which, if translated, I have no doubt would resemble the anathems of Dickens' irate Mr. Wardle upon the head of the fat youth: "Joe! D——n that boy, he's asleep again.

VIGILANT INSPECTORS.

From the contemplation of such universal somnolence it is refreshing to turn to the conspicuous activity of the constabulary and their coadjutors, the detectives or spies, whose name in this country is legion. For instance, it is a law of the land, that no stranger shall remain two days in any city without furnishing the magistracy information as to his home, his name, and the nature of his business in this country. Whether he stays at a hotel or with a private family, these questions have to be answered, and anyone keeping him beyond the two days without seeing that these regulations are complied with, is liable to a heavy fine. One would naturally think that in a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants, scores of visitors could come, remain a week or two, and then go without attracting the attention of anybody, even though they or their host neglected to give the necessary notification at the burgomaster's office. Let no one delude himself into such an opinion. The spy system is so admirable that no matter how humble your stopping place, even though it be a single garret in the outskirts of the town; or no matter how little you may eat or where; or no matter whether you are large or small, old or young, rich or poor, your movements are every day reported to the chief of police by some one who knows what clothes you wear, what your habits are, where you ate or slept last, where you came from, how long you are likely to stay and where you are going next. I happen to know more about my own case than about that of any one else, so I will be excused for mentioning it by way of illustration. A friend who is employed in the building that answers to the purpose of our City Hall, tells me that he heard my name mentioned, my appearance accurately described, even to the color of my eyes and hair, the fact commented on that I was from Utah, and more recently from London and more recently still from Munich where I had remained a week; and that I expected only to abide here a few days and then go to Berlin, Bremen and other places in the north of Germany. Now, this is just as correct on account of my doings as I could possibly have given myself; but where the officials get their information I cannot conceive, for I have only been in the city thirty-six hours, and have scarcely exchanged words with anyone. In fact I cannot speak enough German to tell where I intended to go, even if I wanted to. You can imagine how gratifying such notoriety is to a person distinguished for for lowliness and humility.

GUILTY.

It is sad to think that in connection with such splendid organization and with such thorough opportunities for acquiring information the judicial system should be so frightfully at fault. The rule of jurisprudence in other countries, that a man is to be considered innocent until proven guilty, is here reversed, and until he can prove his innocence his guilt is never doubted. So the credit which the courts take to themselves for securing more convictions than their fellow jurists in England and America will be easily understood.

NO WATER IN THEIR'S.

The laws are very strict against religious innovators, and they are enforced with particular severity against all such innovators as believe in the doctrine of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. Not long ago this ordinance was being attended to near the city in the quiet of night, when the police appeared on the scene. This was the signal for a general scattering and in the darkness all escaped capture. However, a man living here who is well known for his devotion to that principle and others equally obnoxious to the religious opinions of the country, was summoned to appear and answer to the charge of baptizing contrary to law. He obeyed the summons, and though he stoutly maintained his innocence and though the police could not swear that he was in the water or even present, yet the magistrate decided that unless within three days he could produce testimony that some one else did the baptizing, he should pay a fine of 40 marks ($10). It is this negative sort of evidence accepted in all cases, that helps wonderfully in keeping the prisons full; because, though a man may be entirely guiltless, as in the case quoted he undoubtedly was, if he is the victim of circumstances his conviction and punishment is assured.

UNHOLY BONDS.

The United States is not the only nation which has taken it into its head to make laws respecting marriage, as to what forms are legal, etc. One of the latest achievements of the Bavarian government is the passage of an act, which goes into effect this month, declaring all marriages illegal which have not been or shall not be performed by a judge. A couple who are so unfortunate as to have been married by a clergyman, no matter though they may have lived together as man and wife for half a century, are required to appear before the magistrate, once more make their vows to each other and have the ceremony performed over again. If this is not done, both parties, if they continue to live together, are subject to fine and imprisonment. It will, however, in all such cases—and in this view they may be considered fortunate—render easy the matter of divorce, which is a luxury, under ordinary circumstances, far beyond the reach of plebians; for the simple neglect of a man or woman to submit a second time to an infliction which they have been regretting from the first, is enough to constitute, to all intents and purposes, a lawful separation. Some of the weaker vessels who have by reason of acting the part of good, obedient servants to their husbands become desirable property to retain, insist, with a return of maiden coyness, but with vastly more experience as to the deceitfulness of mankind, on a second wooing with all its accompanying pleasures in the shape of invitations to theatres and ice cream or sour krout, and the usual presents and love tokens which cease with marriage, when with hesitating bashfulness they may again be overcome by the vain promises of forgetful lovers. So the new law, with all its outrageous requirements, is not without some beauty. The measure was designed, it is said, to bring more money into the state coffers which are sadly depleted notwithstanding the enormous taxes and license fees already imposed. Each judicial marriage will bring about 100 marks clear profit to the treasury, whereas the priest would tie the knot just as securely for one tenth or twentieth of that sum. On the other hand the large income from divorce fees will be materially lessened; and, finally, it is not unlikely that a goodly number of the men throughout the kingdom will love a hundred marks better than they do their wives, and will rather cling to the one than to the other. As a financial move, therefore, the success of the law is open to question.

THE WAR PATH.

Figuratively speaking, Germany is the character who struts around Europe with fists doubled up, ready at any moment to take up a quarrel, and sometimes even trailing his coat tails on the ground, inviting somebody to step on them. Truthfully speaking, it has an enviable military prestige, the most skilful generals, and the most cunning diplomatists in making favorable alliances with its neighbors. So there is not nearly the fear over the late belligerent utterances of the representative of the Czar that one might expect to find. There is, on the contrary, a feeling of the utmost confidence and security. The army was never in better condition as to the class of men; its number was never so large in time of peace, and was never susceptible of such rapid increase in case of war; while the improved arms, the splendid discipline of the troops, the thorough knowledge of the officers in all the elements of modern warfare, and the constantly increasing strength of the fortifications of the military towns, together with the ambitious desire to acquire further possessions and an enlargement of territory, all combine to make this nation not at all averse to the idea of picking up any gage the Great Bear of the north may see fit to fling down. It seems incredible that a country like this, with so poor a population, can maintain such an immense standing army. The secret lies in the fact, that the law makes it necessary for every man, no matter what his condition, to serve a part of his life as a warrior, for which service he receives, if a private soldier, the magnificent salary of three cents per day, his clothing and board found. Those who can pass a satisfactory scientific examination are only required to remain one year in the regular army, while those whose education is not so good, have three years to stay there. After that, each one is for twelve years liable to be called for in the reserve, the Landwehr and the Landsturm. In case of war all these are called out, but the latter class are more privileged in that they cannot be required to go out of their own country.

CUMULATIFE PRIVILEGES.

The following strange piece of information has been given to me as a positive fact: for every fine imposed upon or term of imprisonment suffered by an individual here, it is the custom to deprive him of some of the rights and privileges which the more law-abiding citizen is said to possess. (It may be mentioned that it requires a keener eye that that of your correspondent, and indeed than that of most of the law-abiding class themselves to discover where these extra privileges are). But exactly the opposite, paradoxical as it may seem, is the case. The oftener a man gets punished for breaking the law, and consequently the more rights he loses, the greater liberty does he acquire; until the freest men out of state prison are those who have been inside the most. How this conclusion is reached I cannot tell, unless by the same system of logic as that which convinced the Israelitish clothes dealer, who lost two dollars on every coat he sold, that he was only able to make a living because he sold so many.

TUTT'S PILLS!

AS AN ANTI-BILIOUS MEDICINE,

are incomparable. They stimulate the TORPID LIVER, invigorate the NERVOUS SYSTEM, give tone to the DIGESTIVE ORGANS, create perfect digestion and regular movements of the bowels.

AS AN ANTI-MALARIAL

They have no equal; acting as a preventive and cure for Bilious, Remittent, Intermittent, Typhoid Fevers, and Fever and Ague. Upon the healthy action of the Stomach and Liver depends, almost wholly, the health of the human race.

DYSPEPSIA.

It is for the cure of this disease and its attendants, SICK-HEADACHE, NERVOUSNESS, DESPONDENCY, CONSTIPATION, PILES, &c., that these Pills have gained such a wide reputation. No remedy was ever discovered that acts so speedily and gently on the digestive organs, giving them tone and vigor to assimilate food. This accomplished, the NERVES are BRACED, the BRAIN NOURISHED, and the BODY ROBUST. Try this Remedy fairly and you will gain a Vigorous Body, Pure Blood, Strong Nerves, and a Cheerful mind.
