the true educators everywhere; male children inherit in the maternal line, and female in the paternal. As exer-cise is necessary for the development of the child, so is work necessary for the woman. There should be some-thing besides drudgery or a life of luxury. The newspapers are now ad-vising women to qualify themselves for the emergencies of life, for in the case of the disability of the husband the burden is upon her to rear the family. A man cannot be both father and mother, but the woman frequently and mother, but the woman frequently has to stand in the place of both in caring and providing for her tender flock.

A Collision.

About half-past eight last evening a carriage containing a number of boys was standing under the trees near Hon. John Sharp's residence on South Temple Street. There were quite a number of young ladies standing around and all were chatting merrily. A buggy containing a gentleman and his wife came rapidly up the street, and the driver not discovering the carriage collided with it. It tipped up, and the boys went scrambling' out. The buggy was thrown out on to the road and the lady hurled to the ground. Her husband jumped, and fortunately both escaped with a few scratches and a shaking. Several of the young ladies who had been near the carriage were to say that women were born orators, for they could talk three hours with-out getting a sore throat, and that was were badly frightened.
