

DISCOURSE

By President BRIGHAM YOUNG, TABERNACLE, Jan. 27th, 1856.

[REPORTED BY GEO. D. WATT.]

I am thankful for the privilege of again appearing here before the brethren and sisters. A few of us have been absent for a short time, and in our absence I hope and trust you have been blessed with the Holy Spirit of the Lord. I pray for the continuance of the light of that Spirit to rest upon the saints, this I crave continually for myself and for all who profess to be saints of the Most High.

As I have frequently thought and said, when duty requires I am happy in going from home and I am happy in returning, for it is my greatest joy and comfort to do what the Lord requires of me and what I know to be my duty, no matter what it is if the Lord requires it of me. This course gives joy and peace. When this principle becomes the acting principle of all the saints we shall find that Zion is here; we shall be in the midst of it, we shall enjoy it.

As individuals we enjoy Zion at present, but not as a community; there is so much sin, darkness and ignorance, and the veil of the covering which is over the nations of the earth is measurably over the Latter Day Saints. The same unrighteous principles, which becloud the minds of men universally, more or less becloud the minds of the Latter Day Saints. Though the veil is partially broken to the saints, though it becomes thin, as it were, and the twilight appears like the dawning of the day, yet we may travel for many years before the sunshine appears. It does not yet appear to this people, they are merely in the twilight.

As one expressed it in ancient times, "we see through a glass darkly"—through a smoked or dim glass—through which we cannot behold objects clearly with the natural eye.

We have not faith sufficient to have revelation, to have the visions of eternity opened unto us so clearly that we may see things as they are, consequently we have to live by faith and not by sight. We have to live by the principles of the gospel, which is faith in the heart and obedience to its requirements. It is our joy and salvation that we have this privilege.

If we could understand the nature of the priesthood, could comprehend it fully, this people, as a community, the elders as elders of Israel, quorums as quorums, when they present themselves before the Lord would possess keys to unlock the treasury of heaven, and we could receive as one person receives from another. To us as a people the keys of the rich store house of the Lord are committed, yet we do not fully know how to unlock and receive. We receive a little here and there, and the hearts of the people are comforted by the very priesthood we are in possession of, which has been given to this people for the express purpose of their receiving that which God has given them, though not yet to possess it independently, but as means for trial.

This priesthood is given to the people, and the keys thereof, and when properly understood they may actually unlock the treasury of the Lord, and receive to their fullest satisfaction. But through our own weaknesses, through the frailty of human nature we are not yet capable of doing so.

We have to humble ourselves and become like little children in our feelings,—to become humble and childlike in spirit, in order to receive the first illuminations of the spirit of the gospel, then we have the privilege of growing, of increasing in knowledge, in wisdom and in understanding. This is a great privilege, while the world, excepting this people who inhabit these valleys and those that are associated with us in different parts of the earth, are destitute of this principle and privilege. Still, many of us, and I may say comparatively all of us, are upon the same ground, situated precisely like other professors of religion, in order that we may struggle, wrestle and strive until the Lord bursts the veil and suffers us to behold his glory, or a portion of it.

If we did fully understand the principles of the gospel, the keys of the priesthood, it would be familiar with us, and be easy to be understood and to act upon and perform, and be no more of a miracle to know how to receive the things of God by revelation than it is now a miracle to know how to cast the seed into the ground, after it is prepared, and reap our crops.

An individual who holds a share in the priesthood and continues faithful to his calling, who delights himself continually in doing the things God requires at his hands, and continues through life in the performance of every duty, will secure to himself not only the privilege of receiving but the knowledge how to receive the things of God, that he may know the mind of God continually; and he will be enabled to discern between right and wrong, between the things of God and the things that are not of God. And the priesthood, the Spirit that is within him, will continue to increase until it becomes like a fountain of living water, until it is like the tree of life, until it is one continual source of intelligence and instruction to that individual.

This is one of the most glorious and happy principles that can be set before any people, or any individual who will be faithful to his God and to his religion. Upon whoever are bestowed the keys of the eternal priesthood by a faithful life will secure to themselves power to see the things of God, and will understand them as plainly as they ever understood anything by gazing upon it with their natural eyes, or as clearly as they ever could distinguish one object from another by their sensations.

It is the privilege of every person who is faithful to the priesthood, who can overcome the enemy, thwart the design of death, or him that hath the power of it, to live upon the earth until their appointed time; and they may know, see and understand, by revelation, the things of God just as naturally as we understand natural things that are around us.

We inquire, is this the character of the people called Latter Day Saints? We can say it is, the character of many of them, but when we reflect, it is not the case with the whole of them. There are many who never fail to improve upon every means of grace given them, upon every particle of light imparted to them. They perform every duty that is made known to them, they cease to do evil wherever an evil is presented to them, they refrain so far as is in their power, from every act and from every thought and disposition which is contrary to the holy gospel.

Again, when we look around we see many, very many, men and women who profess to know the things of God, to belong to his family, to the church of the firstborn, the Church of Jesus Christ, who are oftentimes wrought upon by the Holy Spirit of the gospel which has caused them to rejoice therein, who give thanks to their God, rejoice with joy unspeakable, and you would think they were very near the kingdom of heaven, near the threshold of the gate which opens into the presence of the Father and the Son, and yet, if anything crosses them, will give way to an evil temper, and if anything is presented to them which they do not understand they condemn it at once, they are ready to pass judgment upon that which they do not understand. If they are crossed by their friends and families they are ready to speak by the spirit of evil, by the spirit of contention; they are ready to receive a little malice in their hearts. They do all this, they turn round and repent of it, they are sorry for it, and they say they will try to do better, "will try to overcome their passions, or the temptations of the evil one in their natures." You see them again, have they kept themselves pure? No they have not, but they have given way to evil, to a little dishonesty, falsifying, shading of sentiment speeches, sayings and doings of their neighbors. They have given way to anger, and will remark, "It is true I got angry, I was overcome, true I acted the fool, but I mean to refrain from so doing in the future."—And thus they live for a spell, but how long will it be before they are again overtaken in fault? Then if a delusive spirit, professedly a righteous one, is cast into a neighborhood, how easy such people are deceived by it, led away by it.

At one time you see them as enthusiastic as mortals can be in what they call righteous principles, and hear them saying, "I have more light now than I ever had before in my life, I am better now than I ever was, I am filled with the Holy Spirit."

This is the way we often find them, they are rejoiced exceedingly and are upon Pisgah's top, flaming Latter Day Saints, and perhaps when the next day or the next week has passed over they are angry, filled with malice and wrath. After a while they will say "that was a delusive spirit, it is true I felt joyful and happy, I thought it was the best spirit and the most light I ever enjoyed in all the days of my life, but I now find I was deceived, I find that if I had continued in that spirit there was a trap laid to catch me, to decoy me away and destroy my faith in the holy gospel." Is this the case with the Latter Day Saints? Yes, with many of them.

Our religion is a practical and progressive one. It will not prepare a thief, a liar, a sorcerer, a whoremonger, an adulterer, a murderer, or a false swearer in one day so that he can enter into the celestial kingdom of God. We ought to understand that when our lives have been filled with all manner of wickedness, to turn and repent of our sins, to be baptized for the remission of them and have our names written upon the church records does not prepare us for the presence of our Father and Elder Brother. What will? A continuation of faithfulness to the doctrines of Christ; nothing short of this will do it. The Latter Day Saints should understand this. Do they? Yes. Do they live to it? A great many of them do not. All ought to live their religion every day, and there are a great many who do. But there are a great many who do not, who are overcome with evil, get out of the true path of righteousness and do those things which are wrong. They contend with each other, quarrel, have broils and difficulties in families, and in neighborhoods, law with each other touching property, one saying this is mine, and another saying it is not yours, but it is mine. One says, "You have wronged me," the other says, "I have not." Thus there are thousands of plans which the enemy of all righteousness employs to decoy the hearts of the people away from righteousness.

If this people would live their religion and continue year after year to live their religion, it would not be many years before we would see eye to eye; there would be no difference of opinion, no difference of sentiment, and the veil that now hangs over our minds would become so thin that we should actually see and discern things as they are.

True we labor under many embarrassments with regard to our progress in Christian life, and it is right we should be situated just as we are. We wish to save the world of mankind, and difficulties, embarrassments, and obstacles are thrown in our way continually. If this congregation could live 20 years without communion and intercourse with any other people, if we did not preach any more to the world and no more saints were gathered from abroad, we might perhaps train ourselves so as to see eye to eye, and that too before we had lived as many years to come as this church has been organized.

But no, if we are instructed now and understand all it is our privilege to understand, another year we must have another batch of clay thrown in the mill, as br. Kimball calls it, and this new supply spoils more or less of the clay that is already well tempered, and it is right that it should be so. Though this is a good comparison, the making of vessels out of clay and the grinding up of clay, still, is it in every respect correct? We might carry it out perhaps, but I argue and believe with all my soul that if there were 10,000 saints to emigrate to this point yearly from England, or any other country, and though thousands of the wicked should gather with them, it would not prove for one moment that any saint would be obliged to sin thereby; it would not prove for one moment that this congregation before me would be obliged to do wrong.

Though we may be mingled together and our interchanges are as they are, still if a stranger should look upon us as a community who have been here many years, and see but few of the new comers do wrong, and then judge us off and say we are all evil, that none of us are righteous, that there is no good fruit here, that would be an unrighteous judgment and decision.

It is our privilege, for you and me to live from this day so that our consciences will be void of offence towards God and man; it is in our power to do so, then why don't we? What is the matter? I will tell you what the difficulties and troubles are, by relating br. John Young's dream. He dreamed that he saw the devil with a looking-glass in his hand, and the devil held it to the faces of the people, and it revealed to them everybody's faults but their own.

The difficulty is neglecting to watch over ourselves. Just as soon as our eyes are turned away from watching ourselves, to see whether we do right, we begin to see faults in our neighbors; this is the great difficulty and our minds become more and more blinded until we become entirely darkened. So long as I do the thing the Lord requires of me, and do not stop to inquire what I shall tell to my neighbor as his duty, and pay very close attention to my individual person that my words are right, that my actions are right before God, that my reflections are right and that my desires are according to the holy gospel, I have not much time to look at the faults of my neighbors. Is not this true?

This is our practical religion; it is our duty to stop and begin to look at ourselves. We may have trials to pass through, and when people come to me and tell me that they are wonderfully tried and have a great many difficulties to encounter, have their troubles on the right and on the left, and what to do they are at a loss to know, I say, "I am glad of it." I rejoice to think that they must have trials as well as other people. And when they say, "It seems as though the devil would overcome me," it is a pretty good evidence that an individual is watching himself.

If people could always understand the manifestations of the Spirit upon themselves, they would learn that they can be tempted as well as other people, and that would make them careful to watch against temptation and overcome it. Consequently I rejoice for them, inasmuch as every individual who is prepared for the celestial kingdom must go through the same things.

I am happy, brethren, for the privilege of having temptation. A great many people have thought that in my life I was not tempted like other men. I tell them if I am it is none of their business; it is nothing to them. Some say "Br. Brigham, you slide along and the devil lets you alone." If I have battles with him, I can overcome him single handed quicker than to call in my neighbors to help me. If I am tempted to speak an evil word, I will keep my lips locked together. Says one, "I do not know about that, that would be smothering up bad feelings, I am wonderfully tried about my neighbor, he has done wrong, he has abused me and I feel dreadful bad about it. Had I not better let it out than to keep it wrangling within me?" No. I will keep bad feelings under and actually smother them to death, then they are gone. But as sure as I let them out they will live and afflict me. If I smother them in myself, if I actually choke them to death, destroy the life, the power and vigor thereof, they will pass off and leave me clear of fault and pure, so far as that is concerned; and no man or woman on earth knows that I have ever been tempted to indulge in wicked feelings. Keep them to yourselves.

If you feel evil, keep it to yourselves until you overcome that evil principle. This is what I call resisting the devil, and he flees from me. I strive to not speak evil, to not feel evil, and if I do, to keep it to myself until it is gone from me, and not let it pass my lips.

You should succeed in bringing your tongues into subjection, so as to never let them speak evil, so that they will perfectly obey your judgment, and the discretion God has given you, and are perfectly obedient to the will of the Holy gospel. How long have we to live for that? I do not know, but I am strongly of the opinion that it is possible for a person to overcome their dispositions to evil to such a degree that they will have no evil in the heart to slip out over the tongue, and if there is none in the heart, there is less danger of the tongue's being used to the disadvantage of that individual, or to that of anybody else. If there is nothing in the heart which governs us and controls to an evil effect, the tongue of itself will never produce evil.

Quite a number of us have returned from our southern mission, and as I have given you a few of my views with regard to some of the particular parts of our religion, I say for myself, and for the rest of my brethren who have been absent with me, we are happy to see you. I am, and I am sure that the rest are, glad of the privilege of standing before you again in this house. I have nothing particular upon my mind, only to urge all the Latter Day Saints to live their religion.

I might say something with regard to the hard times. You know that I have told you that if any one was afraid of starving to death, let him leave, and go where there is plenty. I do not apprehend the least danger of starving, for until we eat up the last mule, from the tip of the ear to the end of the fly whipper, I am not afraid of starving to death. There are many people who cannot now get employment, but the spring is going to open upon us soon, and we are not going to suffer any more than what is for our good. I am thankful for the hand of the Lord which is visible; I am as thankful for this providence of his as for any that I ever received. I have told you, years ago, my feelings with regard to their sympathies, their faith, gratitude and thankfulness, and their acknowledgement of the hand of the Lord and of the dispensations of his providence. My soul has been grieved to bleeding, to see the waste, and the prodigal feeling of this people in the use of their bountiful blessings. Many have walked them underfoot, and have been ready to curse God who bestowed them. They wanted gold and silver, instead of wheat and corn, and fine flour, and the best vegetables that ever grew upon the earth. They walked them underfoot, and set at naught the choice blessings of the Lord their God. If I were to see those individuals obliged to gnaw the ground in order to get out the thistle roots, and have no fingers to dig them with, it would not be a disagreeable sight to me, until they learn to know who it is that feeds them.

We never ought to be without three, or five years provisions on hand. But when you see men run to hell to sell a bushel of wheat for sixty cents, instead of laying it up in their granaries for a day of scarcity, you are forced to conclude that they would trade with the very devil to get his coat and shoes in exchange for their wheat. I hope they will learn wisdom in the future, and lay up wheat to feed the brethren when they come here from distant countries. If they will learn wisdom now, I will promise them, in the name of Israel's God, that the earth will yield its abundance, as it has heretofore. Men in these valleys have reaped crop after crop which grew spontaneously, without putting a drag or a plow in the land, and yet they are ready to curse God for his blessings. How do you suppose the Lord feels? If he were no better than I am, he would chastise us far more severely than we have been. I will give way to others.

REMARKS

BY PRESIDENT HEBER C. KIMBALL, TABERNACLE, JAN. 27, 1856.

[REPORTED BY GEO. D. WATT.]

I do not feel as though I desired to take up much time, I merely wish to say a few words in regard to what we have heard to-day. I am aware that a great many in the world are pleased with fancies, they are gratified and edified with that which is artificial, but if people would be pleased and instructed with such remarks as we have heard to-day it would be well, for they are the principles that will save you, that will lead you into the celestial world. Listen to that which you have heard to-day from br. Brigham; he is our leader, our prophet, our priest and our governor, the Governor of the Territory of Utah. In him is every power and key of celestial life and salvation pertaining to every person there is on this earth, and that is a principle which but few persons realize. You take away the keys that are with him, and with those who sustain him, and I would not give a dime for you. Sin to such a degree that br. Brigham and his counselors, and those who are associated with him, the apostles of Jesus Christ, withdraw from your midst, and I would not give a dime for all the salvation you have got; that is my faith. He holds the keys of the kingdom of heaven, just as much as Peter, James and John did after Jesus committed the keys to them on the mount, and said, "I give unto you the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whomsoever you bless I will bless, and whomsoever you curse I will curse."

Take away that power, take away those keys, and you cannot find your way into the celestial kingdom. The keys in his possession will unlock the door and let you through into another existence more excellent than this. He holds the keys, can anybody pass without them? No, only as they get authority through him. Are they appreciated as they should be? Do this people listen to the counsel that proceeds from his mouth, as to the words of the living oracles of God?

I would not care if there was not a Bible within ten thousand miles of this place, or any other book or scrip, here are the oracles living right in our midst, and we receive them from day to day by word of mouth from a living man, an apostle who is alive, and through a priesthood which is living in our midst.

At the same time a great many persons think more of the testimony of a dead apostle than they do of a living one, and think more of dead prophets than they do of living ones who are here in their midst. It is generally the case that men do not fully appreciate their blessings in life; often when their wives are dead they think more of them than they did when they were living, and it is just so with some wives in regard to their former husbands. We do not always appreciate the blessings we have in our possession until they are taken from us; then we begin to appreciate them; so when good men have left us we cease thinking of their faults, but begin to cherish the memory of their good deeds.

It is thus with a great many of our sisters when their husbands have gone to preach the gospel; they now think they never had a fault in the world, but when they were at home they were full of failings.

I am not a going to preach a discourse filled with high flown, exalted words, having no meaning to it, but I will come down to the capacity of every person, that they may understand. Many times we do not appreciate our children, and take a right course with them when living, and when they were dead we mourn and think of their lovely behavior, but never think of their misdeeds. Let us try to think as much of the living as of the dead. That which is dead will
