

like saying a good deal, but anyone who knows the inner history of the club movement in recent years will be compelled to accept it in the main.

IN WOMAN'S WORLD.

The fashionable flower for table decoration is the camellia. The pure white flower is the most beautiful, and nesting in its dark green leaves makes a picture of purity and coolness. The scarlet and white and the faintly tinted camellias are very beautiful also.

A correspondent asks for a novel way of entertaining a whist party of 10 or 12 married friends. She wishes to make it a St. Valentine or Washington's Birthday function. Considering that the guests are married, hearts and darts would be rather out of place, but a great deal of fun might be had if the invitations were sent on comic valentines of the more decent sort, with the request that each guest come dressed to personate a caricature of himself.

Long lace veils are becomingly draped over hats and tied at the side. These are 46 inches long, and only as wide as the ordinary tulle or net face veil. Dotted net veils of the same size are edged with lace, and are very pretty. There is no disputing the becomingness of these ample veils.

There is nothing especially new in hats, except that the all fur hat is not now so frequently seen as the fur combinations with embroidered and jeweled bands, moles, and other rich materials. These are less trying than all fur, and are not so heavy looking. Silky, furry beaver hats are very popular, and very becoming. They need little trimming, and almost invariably have ostrich feather decorations, and little else besides.

THE JANUARY GIRL. The Keith-O'Brien "Mannish" girl! She wears a coal and vest! She struts out each waning curl, The same as all the rest. It was in September—quite a while ago— But since, through Fashion's whirls, She's been a dozen various Designs and styles of girls. In October she was a military maid With gift upon her coat, And twenty yards of golden braid Between her waist and throat. And after that, a Gibson girl With aspect stately, Again she tried the busy whirl, And wrote things at a desk. O she has gone through all the styles— Walked like a kangaroo— Tried languishment and other wiles And been athletic, too. Today her shoulders are square Her hair the proper curl; She's been a dozen varied kinds— The Keith-O'Brien girl.
