The Grenadier Guards.

LONDON, April 21.—There was great excitement in military circles this morning, when the men of the Third battalion of the grenadier guards, quartered at Chelsea barracks in this city, refused to obey the order to parade in full marching order. The oldest members, the more discontented portion of the battalion and men having the longest terms of service, were placed under arrest and an investigation into the cause of the mutiny was commenced. The men declare that they have been long subjected to a series of excessively annoying drills for which there was no cause or reason. They say the drills were not ordered with a view of perfecting the battalion in military manoeuvres, or in manual arms, but solely for the convenience of their officers.

Information Wanted.

Mr. William C. Martin, 131 West Street, Los Angeles, Cal., is exceedingly anxious to discover the whereabouts of his mother. With this view he has written to a gentleman in this city, and in the hope of it assisting in the attainment of the object sought, we here insert extracts from the communication:

My mother was a forewoman in a silk factory in London, England. Her parents' name, I am almost certain, was Strong. Still I may be mistaken. The only record I have is a letter from her sister signed Elizabeth Strong, Upper Clapton, North London, in the year 1865. Her sister was then in the employ of a timber merchant by the name of Goodman. I have a letter from him in which he tells me he does not know what became of her, but he remembers her I am quite positive. Her father and mother were from Herefordshire county, England. My mother came across the plains with the hand carts. I understand my mother and three other girls were left behind at or near Horseshoe Bend, Wyoming, on account of fatigue. My father, it seems, was a freighter and came across my mother there. His name is Charles H. Martin. My mother was married before she came to America, but I cannot say what name it was she took upon being married.

My idea in communicating with some who came into Utah in the year of the hand carts was that some of the women and girls may have formed an acquaintance with my mother on board the ship which brought them across. In this manner I might establish her name when she came to America, and thus trace from that her relatives. My mother says her first name was Annie Estelle.

Any person possessed of the information desired will confer a favor by communicating the same to Thomas G. Webber, Esq., Z. C. M. I., Salt Lake City, to this office, or to Mr. Martin.

Jimpson (to new grocer)—I fear you will have a hard time building up a trade here; there will be so much opposition. Grocer (hopefully)—I appreciate the difficulty. It requires lots of grit and sand, but I've got both.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., April 21.—During the evictions at Morewood this afternoon many exciting scenes occurred. At the house of Martin Wegenski the deputies were attacked by women. A mob of 300 people on the outside had to be dispersed by the militia. Affairs at Morewood are somewhat critical at this hour (midnight). Early in the evening crowds of strikers broke in the windows of houses from which people were evicted and began dancing. The dance will end with a fight.
