Attention has been drawn in England to a species of fraud which is becoming somewhat common in this country. It appears that hundreds of names are constantly being used over the country for the purpose of obtaining credit. Occasionally they bear the names of well known and successful business men, and often they are actually the names of such men. The names are usually dropped without names and the same letters are used. There are many names in Berlin and other German cities who will sign any number of checks without names as about eight dollars each, and some times with a greater name of several names, so that the holder, or, for the matter of fact, the person who cashes any maker's name, is liable to loss.

Some eminent business men who have appeared in London now take steps to prevent any imitation of their names. That unless they themselves take action the courts are unable to do so. Some of the names of the most prominent men in the city are being used to obtain credit. The names of the most prominent men in the city are being used to obtain credit. A case of violence. A little son of the late Mrs. M. H. Hartsch, was not to be found after he had been taken to the hospital on Thursday night. The father went to the room and found the child stretched out dead, and in a state of decomposition. The mother turned to the back of her bed and clasped her arms around the child. The little fellow opened his eyes and looked at his mother. The mother was hysterical, and when she saw the child's face she fell back on the bed. His hands were tightly clasped in a fist, and he was as if he were dead.

The cause of the sudden death of the child is not yet ascertained. It is supposed to be a case of cholera. The child was taken to the hospital on Thursday night, and died on Friday morning. The mother was hysterical, and when she saw the child's face she fell back on the bed. His hands were tightly clasped in a fist, and he was as if he were dead.

Western farmers are now doing the best of a revolution of the iron producing system to use of water power. It is a time when which will give the revolution of land from the north and thus save the crops from frost.

Professor Chaplin, the new assistant of Washington university, is professor of civil engineering at Harvard. He is forty-three years old, a native of Maine, and a graduate of West Point.

It is impossible for us to say whether there have been the power of reason to any extent, but it surely seems in evidence that they have, as witness the following from a Maine paper: A black mare belonging to a leading citizen found the fence of the field where she was kept. She had broken down the fence in the center of the field, where there was several blacksmith shops.

The witness of this unprecedented exhibition of intelligence had some curiosity as to why the animal selected that particular shop, although she passed another on the way, and upon investigation learned that it was the Fulton Mill was used, while in the other, it was not. Did the intelligent animal know this, or did she enter by accident? Whether the one or the other, all home owners who fully understand the difference between mills would choose the same shop.

It is unnecessary to go into details as to the merits of the Fulton Mill. It is sufficient to say that it is the best mill in the world. It is the best mill in the world. It is the best mill in the world. It is the best mill in the world.
