BIG MEN OF OLD TESTAMENT

Rev. Short Takes Up Sunday Liquor
Question—The Shadow of Peter —Water Finds Its Level.

A variety of timely subjects was treated upon by the ministers of the various churches at their regular services in this city yesterday, all having to do with the temporal welfare and spiritual salvation of the human race.

Rev. Herbert Hays preached the fourth of a series of sermons on the great men of the old testament. Rev. Hays said, in part:

In Abraham began the Jewish race and the great spiritual movement that came into the world with the Jewish people. Moses systematized both the thought of the people and the people themselves. Joshua settled the people into their own country. Samuel now comes to centralize the people and develop them into a great nation. Samuel was born in answer to prayer. He was early taken to the religious headquarters of the Jews for training in leadership. All through his training his mother kept in close touch with him, a very necessary thing in those days.

When Samuel was yet a boy, God spoke to him. When children are old enough to learn evil, they are old enough to learn good. It soon became evident that Samuel was to lead the whole people of Israel in the higher things of life. If a young man has the faith he should be listened to as well as any one else.

Samuel now entered upon a long period of quiet but influential work. He mingled freely among the people as their counselor and friend. He was their ruler not so much in legal position as in fact.

In the last years, when he saw that Saul, the first king, was going to pieces, he anointed David to be king when Saul's end should come.

The last thing this great and good man did was to establish the order of prophets. The great mission of the prophet was to bring the people back to moral conformity to the Ten Commandments.

SUNDAY LIQUOR QUESTION.

Rev. F. B. Short of the First Methodist church took up the matter of closing saloons and allowing clubs to remain open. He emphatically declared against the principle of compelling one set of houses dealing in liquor to close, while another class is permitted to dispense it. In the religious question as to whether the city officials should close the saloons and allow the clubs to remain open, Rev. Short said:

"No, emphatically no! It is true that the clubs are allowed special privileges by law, but only in so far as these privileges do not conflict with the law. We should be fair to the saloonkeeper as well as to the millionaire, and I want to see no discrimination made. If I were a saloonkeeper I would join with others in the same business and fight out to a finish question of closing the saloons and allowing the clubs to remain open."

"I want it to be distinctly understood that I believe that it is better to close the saloons on Sunday and allow the clubs to remain open than to allow both to remain open, but such a course is unfair and unjust. It is true that the city officials have the right to close the saloons and leave the clubs open. I have also the legal right to close one saloon and allow all the others to run un molested, but such a course shows discrimination in the administration of the law. The power granting the clubs licenses should compel them to observe the letter of the law."

Members of the clubs claim immunity from the law because their members are not seen in a drunken condition. There are just as many intoxicated run drinkers as there are non-intoxicating run drinkers. The only difference between them is that the rich man can afford to hire a cab and be helped to his home, while the poor man is kicked into the street to be picked up by a policeman. I do not believe in giving liberties to the rich and denying them to the poor.

"I am in favor not only of closing the clubs, but of the drug stores. The man who sells a bottle of whisky is just as much guilty as the man who sells a glass of whisky. If the clubs and drug stores are to be allowed to remain open on Sunday, I believe Chief Pitt should open every saloon in Salt Lake. I do not ask others to accept this view, but in my mind it is the only fair and just one. I believe in treating every man alike in the eyes of the law."

REV. CHARLES MCINTYRE

In the absence of Rev. W. M. Padon, Rev. Charles Curtis McIntyre occupied the pulpit in the First Presbyterian church yesterday. His text was taken from Acts 5:15, "The shadow of Peter passing by." Rev. McIntyre spoke in part as follows:

Every life casts its shadow. It is the spiritual influence or nameless quality of the soul that reaches your heart and forms an atmosphere about your life. It is not what you say or what you seem to be, but what you are, what you actually are, as the perfume of the flower permeates the air, so your shadow diffuses itself upon others. It is unseen, intangible, nebulous. And because of this it is none the less powerful, for this is the material things of life are of no import, and just those things which cannot analyze or handle or see are the great forces of life. It emanates from your life, penetrates and affects their lives, revealing to them what you are even before you have spoken a word. Nor can you control it. Its currents must pass along the invisible lines that connect you with every person that ever knew you. And the applicable fact is that its most unmistakable messages issue forth not when we are conscious that we are influencing another, but when you are totally unaware that you are altering and affecting your life, simply because you are what you are.

Note your tremendous responsibility of your shadow then, your boundless power in it and how you may secure its greatest possible effectiveness.

REV. ALBERT BUXTON

At the Central Christian church, Rev. Albert Buxton delivered a sermon on "Finding One's Level." Taking his text from Acts 1:25, Rev. Buxton said in part:

The proverb that water seeks its level is well known to even the child. The fluid in the spout of the teacup is at the same height as that in the bowl of the vessel. But this is a mere name application of a larger law that everything in the physical world, when restrained, follows the law of its being. The stone falls, hot water steams, the water freezes, the sun rises each day, and will forever rise daily until some new law intervenes; stars twinkle and fire burns.

"Tonight I raise this law to a spiritual application. Character finds the proper place for each human soul. Artificial restraint may thwart nature and make the unworthy, or unjust criticism may for a time debase the worthy, but sometime, when the artificial and unjust conditions cease, every man goes to his own place. "Birds of a feather flock together" is an old proverb. More dignified is that word of Emerson, "What you are sounds so loud, I cannot hear what you say."

We may pity the terrible end of Judas, but we know it was the proper end. Standing face to face with his conscience, what end was his in this life other than the suicide's; standing face to face with his God, what other place for him beyond this life than his own place. What was that place? I know not exactly, but I don't want to be there, do you? His very treason money—the 30 pieces of silver he cast away. This silver was no longer his. Nor would the priests who bribed him receive back this price of blood. That, too, went to its own place, and purchased the very potter's field in which he hanged himself. This, too, became its own place for the burial of the outcast forever.

REV. ROBT. M. STEVENSON.

"What are You Worth to Your Community?" was the subject of Rev. Robert M. Stevenson's discourse yesterday morning at Westminster Presbyterian church. His text was found in Luke 9:16, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Dr. Stevenson's remarks

New Bishopric of Thirty-First Ward.

HENRY R. COULAM,
First Counselor of Thirty-First Ward Bishopric.

At the Thirty-first ward meeting-house last evening, Bishop Edwin S. Sheets was reluctantly and honorably released upon the unanimous vote of the congregation, and the ward bishopric re-organized with Lewis A. Merrill, bishop, and Henry R. Coulam and W. Parker Pratt as respectively first and second counselors. The other organizations of the ward remain unchanged.

The meeting-house was crowded, the first presidency being represented by President John R. Winder, and the Liberty stake presidency by Second Counselor Brian S. Hinckley, who in a feeling address told of the work accomplished by Bishop Sheets during the six and one-half years he had been father to the ward. As Bishop Sheets was going east for several years, the speaker asked the members of the ward to honorably release him from his duties. When the matter was put to the vote, there was a perceptible pause before a single hand went up, and then considerable time elapsed ere there was a united showing of hands. The names of the new bishopric were then presented and unanimously sustained.

President Winder told how reluctant the first presidency was to release Bishop Sheets. He asserted that while numerous changes were being made throughout the church, in a majority of cases they were being made for the better, the case in point, however, was where a valuable worker had asked to be released, and those in authority could not feel justified in keeping him here in the face of circumstances.

On the side of the house the editor of the Desert Farmer and a dry farm expert for the Agricultural college and the American Smelting & Refining company's expert farm. The personnel of the new bishopric is comprised of young and energetic men.

DISASTROUS BLAZE.

Two Families Rendered Homeless by Fire Saturday Night.

A fire which rendered two families homeless and destroyed $3,400 worth of property broke out at 1714 South State street Saturday midnight. The property was owned by Robert Willis. The house was a two story brick. In addition to this a frame barn, a horse, a cow and considerable furniture were destroyed by the flames.

In the side of the house the family of William Davis lived. Two daughters were awakened by hearing a crash and upon looking out saw the barn in flames. Mrs. Davis succeeded in getting her seven children out of the house before the flames reached them. Mr. and Mrs. Davis Butcher and their child, living in the other part of the house, also got out and managed to save a little furniture. The flames quickly spread from the barn to the house and soon the entire neighborhood was aroused. An alarm was turned in and the department responded quickly making the long run in a short time. The firemen were unable, however, to save the burning buildings.

In the barn were a horse and two carriages and a ton and a half of hay. The loss on the house was $1,800; contents of barn, $400 and furniture, $600. The cause of the fire is not known.

FRANCIS COPE REMEMBERED.

Station Between Ogden and Roy Named After Him by O. S. L.

The following general circular notice was sent out today from the operating department of the Short Line, by General Supt. J. M. Davis:

To All Concerned: Effective Aug. 12, a new 3,200-foot passing track at Mile Marker 3.5, between Ogden and Roy, Utah division, is completed and ready for use, and will be known as Cope. The name is given in respect to the memory of the late Francis Cope, general freight and passenger agent of the old Utah Central and Utah Southern roads. Mr. Cope began his railroad career in the seventies, and was actively in service up to the day of his death in 1891. He was not only an efficient officer and good all around railroad man, but he was of the kindest, most genial nature, and a staunch citizen, so that he became one of the most popular officials in intermountain railroad circles. The older railroad men will remember Mr. Cope, with only the most pleasant regard.

Findings of Committee on Wheeling Assault Case Made to Council.

The police committee of the city council met in the office of Chief of Police Tom D. Pitt Saturday night to consider the charges preferred against Detective Frank Wheeling by M. H. Rice, a negro veterinary surgeon. Rice and Wheeling had some trouble about two weeks ago when Wheeling was called to see what Rice had in a small case. The detective thought the case had been stolen and he wanted to see the contents. He claims that the color of the case was white, and that he was a business and acted in an insulting manner toward the officer. The pair went to the chief's office and there, according to Wheeling, Rice called him names and Wheeling struck at him but did not hit him. Rice claims that he was abused and assaulted by Wheeling. The committee, consisting of J. J. Stewart, Ed. J. O'Donnell and Mark Redden, listened to the statements pro and con and announced that the findings would be reported to the council tonight.

Orpheum—The new bill of headliners announced in Saturday's News will be seen at this house tonight.

Manager Winnell makes an announcement in regard to next week's bill, which will be of interest. The Fadedettes of Boston, an orchestra composed entirely of ladies, will be a feature, and the program will be made up from selections indicated by the audience. People desiring to hear any special standard selection, should send in the name of their favorite at once. As a "starter," the musical editor of the "News" suggests selections from the following operas: "A Trip to Africa," "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," and "La Traviata."

New Lyrics—Manager Clark has put on a big bill for the delectation of his patrons this week, and from the way the attendance starts out, the week will be a winner. The audiences have been surprisingly large during the hot season, and now that the cooler nights have started in, the capacity of the place will be tested.

The Cow Boy feature and the other leaders are heartily applauded at each performance.

Majestic—There has been a thorough house cleaning at this theater, and the new management introduces a new bill which gives good satisfaction to its patrons. The regular evening and afternoon performance will continue all this week.
