

upon being informed where he lived the registrar denied the challenge.

Mr. Riser—I have only lived in the city 42 years.

Registrar—I don't notice a frivolous challenge.

A number of parties who had lived in the city from 7 to 16 years came next in order.

Patrick Raymer came from Tennessee in May last; lived three months temporarily with his brother-in-law, at Bountiful; came to Salt Lake and has made it his home for five months, and intends to continue to reside here.

Registrar—I see you wear a "Liberal" badge. Do you belong to the "Liberal" party.

Mr. Raymer—Well, I don't know, now. I don't know that I shall vote at all. That man Webb objects.

Registrar—I thought you might be a "Liberal" colorizer.

Mr. Raymer—No, I'm not. I'm what they call in Tennessee a "sinner," and that's bad enough. But that's my business.

His case was taken under advisement.

Edwin S. Little had lived in the city all his life; had been in Idaho in the summer of 1889; did not go to make his home there.

He was also "taken under advisement."

Henry Mayer, from Park City, came here less than three months ago; had no particular intention as to residence. His case was taken under advisement, but as he is a "Liberal" he has no anxiety over the result.

The registrar's rooms in the Watch Building February 1, presented about the same scene as that exhibited for the three days preceding. Before Registrar Winters there was a host of persons summoned on the ground that they were not bona fide citizens. The majority of these were shown to have constantly resided in the city from nine to thirty years. The cases of those who had lived in town were "taken under advisement."

Default was entered against Daniel Hunter, of 33 First Street, and Joseph A. Flowers, both of whom failed to appear. The return showed that no service had been made on Mr. Flowers.

The case of Edwin L. Parker is one that throws some light on the failure of a number of challenged persons to appear until after their names are published as being among those who did not answer. The return in Mr. Parker's case showed that he had been "personally served." Last evening's News contained his name among those against whom default had been entered. This morning he was before Registrar Winters, and stated that the first and only notice he had had was the newspaper. He was examined and found to be a qualified voter. Here is a case where the challenger reports a service that the evidence shown has never been made. How many more there may be of the same kind is unknown.

Before Registrar McCallum there were also a large number who had lived for years in Mr. Clute's precinct, yet were challenged for non-residence. One of those challenged for being under 21 is Mr. Hyrum Taylor who attained his majority nearly that number of years ago. Among those who failed to come today were the following:

Harry A. Shaw, 45 s. First West Street.
