FARMINGTON ROMANCE. Trained Nurse in Keogh-Hammond

Hospital Here Marries Secretly.

A romance, involving a secret trip to Farmington, the Gretna Green of Utah, a marriage of the parties and a continuation of the secret for period of four months, has just leaked out through the accidental dropping of a bundle of papers in the residence of a bundle of papers in the residence of a friend a day or two ago. The principals in the story are Andrew Lynn McPherson Watt of Victor, Colo., formerly engaged in traveling for a coffin furniture firm of Lincoln, Neb., but now working for his uncle at Victor in the same line. The young lady in the case is, or was, Miss May Hathenbrook, who has for some time next been curployed as

On the date given, Feb. 11, Mr. Watt and Miss Hathenbrook left quietly for Farmington, and there be-came man and wife. After the cere-mony Mrs. Watt returned to her du-ties as nurse in the hospital and her husband went back to Victor to fol-low his work in the store. Why the marriage was kept secret so long can not be conjectured, even the girl's parents remaining h isnorance of the ceremony until today. The pre-sumption has been advanced, however, that Mr. Watt agreed that his af-fianced finish her term of engagement at the hospital, but insisted on "iying up" to blind the hargin against the manded to the hospital authorities.
