Salt Lake college graduates who are members of the Psi Upsilon (Greek letter) fraternity, are receiving a circular letter from the executive council of the fraternity in New York asking for their addresses and subscriptions for the catalegue which will be issued the coming month. Three thousand names have been added to the rolls since the last catalogue was issued in 1898.

The county commissioners have just placed two new filing cases in the office of Internal Revenue Collector Callister. The cases contain about 400 pigeon-holes together and complete the furnishing of that office, which Commissioner Anderson says is the most completely furnished revenue office west of the Missouri river not even barring San Francisco.

Yesterday afternoon workmen were busily engaged in the clerk's room of Judge Diehl's court putting in a telephone. A talking machine is a convenience that has been long needed by the court and prosecutor. The clerk's room and that of his honor has been connected by a push button so that Judge Diehl can be easily communicated with. The number of the new phone is 513. It is understood that a movement is on foot to induce the Council to appoint a stenographer to the court.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. NOYCE.

Estimable Lady Called Hence—Lived In Salt Lake Thirty Years.

Mrs. Harriet Hanford Noyce, of 226 I street, died at her home late yesterday afternoon from a complication of troubles from which she had been suffering for three or more weeks. Mrs. Noyce was born in Mansfield, Nottingham, England, September 28, 1856. She came to Utah while in her youth and soon after her arrival married William Noyce, who is still living. Mrs. Noice was a resident for thirty years and was an ornament to the community in which she lived. She was the mother of eleven children, five of whom preceded her to the other world. The surviving ones are John, Charles, Alfred, George, Harriet, and Mrs. Elizabeth Madsen. They all live in Salt Lake except the last named. The funeral service will probably be held on Friday, but the hour and place have not been fixed as yet.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS.

HILTON WAS NOT REMOVED.

Had Friends Enough Last Night to Negative Mayor's Desires.

WERE TWO VOTES TO SPARE

Saved by Grace of Democratic Effort—Quarrel Still Unsettled—To Come Up at Meeting Next Week.

A large and intensely interested crowd assembled at the meeting of the City Council last night to hear the result of the Thompson-Hilton conflict, which was expected to terminate in the removal by the council of Chief of Police Hilton. The spectators were well paid for their visit but they were disappointed in their expectations of hearing the matter finally disposed of.

The report of the committee on police and prison concurring in the removal of the chief was not adopted, the vote being 8 noes and 6 ayes. Councilmen Arnold, E. H. Davis, Eardley, Fernstrom, Robinson, Spence, Tuddenham and Cottrell voting no and Councilmen Daveler, Hewlett, Robertson, Sharp, Thomas and Vigus voting yes. A. J. Davis was the only member absent.

Robertson and Daveler changed their votes to no, and announced that they would ask for a reconsideration of the matter at next council meeting. So another act will be added to the already worn-out farce.

THE CURTAIN RISES.

Councilman Thomas started the action by moving that the report of the committee on police and prison in regard to the removal of Chief Hilton, which was continued from last week, be brought up for consideration.

The report recommended that the action of the Mayor, that the chief be removed "for the good of the service," be concurred in and the committee justified itself in its action by giving as a further reason for his removal the fact that the chief failed to keep his promise made to the committee a week ago in that he had "this day" failed to send his resignation to the committee. Hewlett moved that the words "this day" be stricken out as it was a misunderstanding on the part of the committee as to when the chief promised to send in his resignation.

Fernstrom asked how Mr. Hilton could be charged with not keeping his word if those words were stricken out of the report. If it is adopted as amended he contended that the chief would not be breaking his word for his promise to resign would be good if executed in twenty or even a hundred years from now.

Mr. Hewlett finally answered that the chief had promised to resign on condition that he be given a certificate of good character and that he promised to resign "to save being removed."

Fernstrom said "I don't believe for one minute that this council will go on record as voting for the removal of Chief Hilton 'for the good of the service.' And for the committee to say that he promised them that he would resign is not true. Mr. Hilton never met with the committee, so how could he make any such promise?"

Here Thomas rose to a point of order and declared that the speaker had no right to say that the report of a committee is not true. Turning to Mr. Fernstrom he said: "I insist that you retract that statement."

Fernstrom replied that he had nothing to take back and said that he was opposed to removing a man before he knew who was to step into his place, and that no man would adopt such a report as the one presented by the committee.

Mr. Hewlett then told of the meeting between the chief, Thomas, Sharp and himself on the Sunday when he said his wife was tired of him being chief and his friends, too, and that he would send in his resignation, but it was a mistake to say that he promised to have it in by last Tuesday night.

Daveler then demanded to hear from the chairman of the committee. Mr. Eardley then stated that the committee held two meetings and at the one held last Monday night Mr. Hewlett telephoned to Chief Hilton and asked him if he was going to resign and his reply was that he would do so on condition that the men under him would not be molested. "Being anxious to verify the statement," said Mr. Eardley, "I stepped to the telephone and he told me the same thing; when I told the committee what he said we all put on our overcoats and went out." Before closing the chairman said he would not vote for the removal of the chief until he knew who the mayor would appoint as his successor.

Daveler started to comment on the manner in which President Cottrell was elected to the chair by receiving Democratic votes, when Mr. Cottrell rose to a point of order and stated that the speaker was not confining his remarks to the matter before the council.

Tuddenham, who was in the chair, ruled that the point was well taken, to which Daveler replied in a very forcible manner: "I now make the charge that a compact has been entered into between the president and Democratic members of this council to keep in office a chief of police against the wishes of a Republican majority. Is that in point?"

Fernstrom replied that they were not there to listen to Republican quarrels.

Daveler concluded by saying that the mayor should not be estopped by a minority from doing his duty, and that it was the duty of this council to vote for the removal of Chief Hilton.

President Cottrell then took the floor and stated that he had no apologies to make as to present conditions, and that he was in hope that he would be given an opportunity to meet the issues in this matter but by reason of the report varying from the mayor's communication he could not do so. He said that the letter recommended the removal of the chief "for the good of the service," but the report says that by reason of his failure to send in his resignation as he promised to do they recommend that the communication of the mayor be concurred in. He said he was not in favor of adopting the report because it was not in line with the mayor's letter.

Thomas then tried to convince the president that the report was to the point, by reading it. He said the committee had been charged with lack of manhood and that he thought "the boot was on the other leg" that the minority members of the committee, Chairman Eardley and Councilman Fernstrom, are the ones who had blocked the action on this matter.

Robertson closed the arguments on the adoption of the report in a very sarcastic speech. He said that the fight to remove the chief began last December, when every policeman was afraid he would lose his job and went around with a list of those who were slated for retirement. He suggested that they be given a long vacation so that they could play their little game of politics outside of the police force. He said that the Democratic members were doing right in this matter and that the Republican majority is responsible for the quibble that is going on. He continued that the actions of the majority was a disgrace to their constituents who elected them and that they had damned themselves and if they ever ran for office again they would find it out. He thought that the mayor should be upheld in his action.

The vote was then taken on the adoption of the report and was lost by the vote as given above.

REMARKABLE CURE OF CROUP.
A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. BORN JAN. 29, 1843.—WILLIAM M'KINLEY—DIED SEPT. 14, 1901.

The mound shown in the cut is the site of the proposed McKinley memorial in Westlawn cemetery, Canton. The late president's remains, guarded by United States soldiers, still repose in a vault in this cemetery.

SOMETHING OF THE MEMORIAL MOVEMENT

In Accordance With His Life's Wish, His Remains Will Rest Permanently in Canton—It Was There He Wooed and Married and There His Greatest Honors Sought Him Out.

It is peculiarly fitting that the national memorial to the late President McKinley should stand in or near the cemetery at Canton, O., which, in accordance with his expressed wish, has been chosen as his last resting place. His remains were placed provisionally in the receiving vault of Westlawn cemetery, near Canton, where at present they lie, guarded by a picked detail of regular troops. It was in Canton that Mr. McKinley gained his first professional laurels. There also he wooed and married the faithful wife who now survives him, and there his highest honors sought him out.

It was in January, 1871, that William McKinley married Miss Ida Saxton, the belle of Canton. Her grandparents a century ago were among the founders of the town, and there the young couple led a life that all who observed it said was both charming and ideal in its beauty and tenderness. Here their only children were born—Katie, whose birth occurred on Christmas day, 1871, and Ida, born in 1873. Both daughters died in early childhood, and the terrible shock of these two deaths in quick succession was a blow that prostrated Mrs. McKinley so completely that she has never really rallied and ever since has been an invalid. Thus a mournful interest attaches to the cemetery containing those two little mounds beneath which are buried the babies whose death left a lifelong sorrow to William McKinley and his wife.

Mr. McKinley's father and mother are also buried in the same lot, their graves being marked by simple headstones rising above and just behind the children's mounds. William McKinley, Sr., whose strong and sturdy nature his son inherited, died in 1892, and "Mother" McKinley, born in Allison, who was the object of her famous son's solicitude to the very last, passed away at Canton in 1897.

Westlawn cemetery, which contains the buried hopes of that sorrowing wife and mother now the object of a nation's tenderest regard, is of itself an attractive spot, seemingly created by nature to excite the noblest sentiments and worthy to be the last resting place of one whose death called forth universal regret. It is not of great extent, containing within the limits of the cemetery proper not more than seventy acres, but its surface is undulating and diversified with magnificent oak trees of the kind so characteristic of that portion of Ohio. The natural landscape features have been judiciously enhanced by careful attention to their environment, and the result is one of the most beautiful spots of its kind in the world.

Overlooking this cemetery and rising from it by a gentle acclivity is a mound about seventy-five feet high containing some five acres, upon the summit of which it is purposed to erect the memorial tomb of the martyr President. Aside from its contiguity to a spot made sacred by association, it is of itself of surpassing beauty and commands one of the world's finest views, according to those who have visited it and enjoyed the prospect from its crest. Two miles away lies the city of Canton, from which and from the country surrounding to a great distance the memorial monument will be plainly visible. Immediately at its feet is the cemetery, from which it is separated by a stream that ripples over pebbles and glides beneath o'erhanging trees.

Many memorials to the late President McKinley have been projected in the shape of tablets, busts, statues, windows, churches and designs for new issues of stamps and currency. The first monument already erected is believed to have been one unveiled at Tower, Mich., in November last, and the first memorial window to be completed is that in a church in Cranford, N. J. In fact, all the people of all the states have hastened to testify their appreciation of President McKinley's character by some tangible and permanent tribute to his memory, even faroff Hawaii having started a fund for the erection of a monument in Honolulu. Scarcely was the funeral pageant over before propositions were made for carrying into effect the plans of various citizens and committees.

The initial steps for the erection of the Canton memorial were taken and a call was issued for popular subscriptions to the object in view at a meeing held the third week in September. The McKinley Memorial association, with twenty-five officers and trustees, including Judge William R. Day as president, Marcus A. Hanna as vice president, Myron T. Herrick as treasurer and Ryerson Ritchie as secretary, was organized, with headquarters in Cleveland, O.

It is hoped and expected that the tribute to take the concrete shape of a national memorial will be spontaneous and popular in the widest sense. No large contributions are asked for or expected, but all the people are invited to testify by their offerings, large or small, their respect for the departed executive.

The amount desired for the consummation of this project is placed at $1,500,000, in order that a memorial shall be erected to surpass anything of similar character on this continent. In addition to this scheme there is another, the William McKinley Memorial Arch association, which purposes to erect a magnificent arch in Washington at the entrance to the great memorial bridge across the Potomac that has been so many years before the public as an eventuality depending upon a grant from Congress. In deference to the wishes of the Canton association, the memorial arch committee has agreed to withhold its proposed solicitation for national contribution and instead has determined to appeal to Congress for the amount necessary for the carrying out of the project in its entirety.

The sum necessary for the construction of the memorial bridge, together with the arch, is also estimated at $1,500,000, or possibly $2,000,000, making a total of $3,500,000.

It has been known for several years that there was a project for a national memorial bridge across the Potomac at Washington, and in connection with this scheme it was proposed to link the McKinley arch by locating it somewhere on the great plaza that was to from one of its approaches on the capital side of the river. This bridge was designed as a monument to American patriotism; and not only that, but as an embellishment of the national capital. As originally projected and accepted by the war department, it was fathered by Senator McMillan of Michigan, who is chairman of the Senate committee of the District of Columbia, and approved by Colonel Bingham, the superintendent of parks and grounds. Colonel Bingham, it will be remembered, has announced some extensive additions to the White House by which more room may be obtained in that historic mansion, the general effect be enhanced if possible and the original architectural scheme be preserved. It is in line with his work and his suggestions that the memorial bridge has been pushed of late, and he is enthusiastic, as indeed is every one who has the improvement of the capital at heart, for its adoption and completion.

ENDORSES CANAL PROJECT.

D. Grimshaw of Beaver City Offers Ideas on Water Proposition.

D. Grimshaw of Beaver City, Utah, has sent the following communication to the "News," in which he takes occasion to recommend the latter's article of Monday evening and to offer a few ideas of his own in relation to the making of canals and dredging Utah lake:

I am very much pleased to learn through the columns of the "News" that the vexed question which so long has agitated the minds of Salt Lake and Utah counties, is about to be amicably settled. It is no question in my mind, that Salt Lake county will not only get much more water, by making a canal and dredging along the banks east of the lake, but the lake itself will be in much better condition to hold the surplus water in times of floods. The project is nicely suggested in Monday's "News," under the heading of "Question on Water Economy," which, if carried into effect, will, I am satisfied, be approved by both counties. One will get the much needed water. The other will be minus the flooded lands. I have a pond which is supplied by seepage or springs. For a number of years I could dam back the water and irrigate my land; of late years it took all I could get to fill it up. So I was obliged to make a ditch and carry it on one of the banks to get the use of it. It works like a charm. I believe that one-half or more of the water that runs into Utah lake in low water times is lost by evaporation, and seeping into the earth. See the miles of dry, barren soil on the west banks of Utah lake, all drinking in a vast amount of this precious fluid. It can be no longer questioned as to the utility of keeping the streams from entering the lake. We all know the more surface we cover with water, the greater the loss. Therefore I would suggest, collect the feeders in one large canal and keep the water from the lake, excepting in times of floods.
