BARNETT MURDER STILL UNSOLVED

Inquest Develops Little Additional Information Regarding Atrocious Crime.

POLICE ARE WIDE AWAKE

So They Say, But No Arrests Appear As the Result of Their Activity.

The murder of John C. Barnett at the notorious American House on Commercial street is the all-absorbing topic in police circles today and every effort is being made by the police to apprehend "Boston Joe" and a fellow named Mann, who were with Barnett just before the murder and who are believed to be guilty of the fiendish crime.

Lieut. Shannon stated this morning that the authorities had a good description of the two men and that every effort is being made to locate and arrest them. The police are also of the opinion that Hugh Meyers, the young man who came from Park City with "Boston Joe" and Mann on Wednesday evening, knows more about the murder than he has been willing to tell.

The fact that he stated he slept on a hall cot in the same floor as room 42 where the murder was committed, and the fact that his hat and shoes were blood stained and he could not, or would not give any explanation as to these conditions are regarded as highly suspicious by the police. He admits that he was in room 42 about 11 o'clock but declared he did not see Barnett at any time and did not see Mann and Boston Joe except when they were on the train coming down from Park City.

Lieutenant Shannon said this morning:

"Undoubtedly Barnett was lured into the room where the murder was committed by this Boston Joe and the fellow named Mann, and I believe Meyers was there when the job was done although, perhaps, he had no actual hand in the murder. While it may be true that fights are of such fequent occurrence in the American House that the roomers would not pay particular attention to noises, if there had been a struggle of any great duration some one would surely have heard the noise. In my opinion Barnett was attacked suddenly, given a blow that knocks him unconscious and then the murderers beat their victim until they were sure he was dead."

BOMBINO'S STORY.

Barnett resides with his father and mother at 1209 west Third South and with them were Barnett's two little daughters, Bertha, aged 5 years, and Nellie, 6 years. The parents are almost prostrated over the terrible occurrence.

This morning the inquest was begun in Justice of the Peace Stanley A. Hanks' court. The jury is composed of Daniel Long, H. G. Olsen and F. J. Shipp.

V. Bombino and Hugh Meyers were the principal witnesses examined. The story related by Bombino makes the time later than at first supposed as he says the men were in his saloon between 12 and 1 o'clock, and that three men entered while he was shaking dice with Barnett, and that the latter bought them a drink and then accepted their invitation to go to their room. He also purchased three bottles of beer. Bombino testified that one of the men was known as "Boston" Joe, another by the title of "Blacky" and the other man "Shorty." He said that these men came back into the saloon some time after 3 o'clock, called for whisky, whispered to each other and then left the place. He said one of the men borrowed a cap and threw down a hat that had blood stains on it. He also stated that the man called "Blacky" had blood on his hands and when asked about it stated that he had been in a mixup.

MEYERS IS CONTRADICTORY.

Meyers, who is a cripple, told about the same story as that he related to a "News" reporter last evening, but there are some contradictions in his stories. He said there were five hoboes on the Park City train and that he had agreed to meet "Boston Joe" at the American House on Wednesday evening. He said he went to room 42 but remained there only 20 minutes and then went to his bed in the hall and went to sleep. He said when he awoke yesterday morning, his white Stetson hat was gone and a black hat, smeared with blood, was left in the place of it. He said his crutch was on the floor in the corner and had blood stains on it, but he could not account for this condition of affairs.

This evening the county physician will perform an autopsy on the body of the murdered man and the inquest will be continued tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The horrible murder has had the effect of stirring up the police to prompt action. Last night Chief Burlow and his men raided the den and rounded up 50 worthless characters and locked them in jail on the charge of vagrancy. Chief Burlow says there is to be a thorough cleaning out of such places and he proposes to keep on raiding them until the loafers, thieves, hopheads and thugs are run out of the city.

FRANCIS WILSON ON SUNDAY THEATERS

Writes Manager Pyper That as a Class Actors Are Opposed to Performances on Sunday.

One more prominent actor has written to Manager George D. Pyper on the subject of theatrical performances on Sunday. This time it is Francis Wilson, the comic opera star and comedian. Mr. Wilson, speaking as an actor who would profit financially by Sunday performances he says he is opposed to working seven days a week and 365 days in the year because he wants his day of rest. Here is his letter received this morning:

Dear Mr. Pyper—As a body, actors do not profit financially from Sunday performances, which are a great curtailment of their leisure, and a great addition to their labor. As a class, then, actors are opposed to Sunday performances.

Speaking as one who would profit financially by Sunday performances, I am opposed to them on the ground that the actor is entitled to a day of rest and will be richer in health and skill for it. I hope we shall not have "Continental Sundays" for American people, but if the people demand it let us all bow gracefully to that will.

BANK CLERKS MEET.

The bank clerks held a well attended meeting last night at the Y. M. C. A. The feature of the evening was the lecture by Manager McNicol of the Postal company on the commercial value of electrical inventions. The lecturer had quite an array of apparatus with which to illustrate the inventions referred to. The program included a baritone solo from Allan Howard.

MYSTERIOUS DEED FIGURES IN CASE

Mrs. Nancy Birkenshaw Claims Life Lease on Disputed Property.

COUNTER CLAIM IS URGED.

Existence of Instrument Is Denied by Administrator in Filing Made Today.

The appearance of a mysterious deed which is held by Mrs. Nancy Briggs Birkenshaw of 524½ east Fifth South street, forms the basis of a contest over the estate of William Birkenshaw, deceased, which has been filed for probate in the Third district court. In answer to the suit brought by Mrs. Birkenshaw against Willis Birkenshaw, administrator of the estate, which was filed today with the county clerk, the existence of the deed is denied and it sets forth that Mrs. Birkenshaw has no interest in the property whatever. The property involved is at 337 east Fifth South street. The rental from the three houses on the ground amounts to $50 a month.

Mrs. Birkenshaw, who was a former wife of the deceased, declares that she holds a life lease upon the property in a deed executed by her husband. She says that shortly after the death of her husband, that Willis Birkenshaw took possession of the property. She asks for restitution of the property and $750 damages, together with the privilege of collecting the rents and enjoying the benefits of the property during her life.

The answer to her claims sets forth that the property is part of the estate of William Birkenshaw and that it should be probated with the rest of the estate.

Woman Reports Robbery of Her Jewels to the Police.

A $1,000 jewelry robbery was reported to the police last night by Mrs. S. F. Milliken, 424 south First West street. The frantic woman called up police headquarters and demanded that a squad of policemen be sent to her place immediately.

"Come quick. My house has been robbed of valuable jewelry," she wailed. Patrolmen Simpson and Brown hurried to the place, and were informed by the lady that during her absence a jewel case containing jewelry valued at $1,000 had been taken.

Patrolman Simpson asked: "Is it not probable that you simply changed the hiding place?"

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed. "When I come to think of it I did change the hiding place this morning. I am much obliged to you." The jewels were found.

STUDENTS ARE AIDED BY PROHIBITION LAW

Fred B. Smith Gives an Example of Benefits In Colleges Where No Liquor Is Obtained.

Fred. B. Smith, the noted talker to men, began the day with a spirited and pointed talk to the boys of the Salt Lake High school at 9 o'clock this morning. The large assembly room was well filled with about 450 of the boys and young men of the school, who received the remarks of the speaker with excellent attention, and, when he was through, gave him vigorous applause. The speaker was perfectly in touch with his audience during his talk of about half an hour.

The talk was replete with exhortation and illustrations, all tending to encourage the boys to keep their good names from being called in question, by avoiding places of doubtful repute. The demand among men of influence and power throughout the country, it was said, is for boys and young men of good morals and habits.

When seen by a "News" reporter after his talk, Mr. Smith expressed his great pleasure at the splendid showing made by the high school. He talked quite freely about prohibition, and its effects on the boys of the country. "Why," said he, "only recently the great benefit of prohibition was called to my attention by a professor in one of the eastern colleges. This man taught for some time in a college in Springfield, Ill., where the teachers had to contend with the drink evil all the time among the boys of the college. Since then he has gone to Maine where prohibition is so old that its results are seen. Here he found a different state of affairs altogether. The boys of the college where he is now teaching appear to be absolutely free from the habit."

Asked as to whether he thought prohibition would be effective if laws were passed to bring about that condition, Mr. Smith said he had no doubt that the law would be as effective as it is in the town of Lawrence, Kansas. "While I was in this town recently," said Mr. Smith, "I met a traveling man who told me that he had offered the bell boy of the hotel where he was staying $1 if he would get him some whisky. The boy tried to do it, but was not successful. My friend had to go without his drink. It was not to be had in the town."

Mr. Smith spoke at the university at 11:35 today, and in the theater at 12:15. He is to speak at the Y. M. C. A. at 3 o'clock this evening.

DIVORCE MILL IS GRINDING TODAY

Friday Matinee Is On in the Third District Court.

DESERTION PRIME CAUSE.

Husbands Leave Their Wives and Wives Leave Their Husbands According to Allegations Made.

Mrs. Amy Houtz was granted a decree of divorce today from Julian C. Houtz, a mining promotor, in Judge Armstrong's court on the ground of desertion. For the past three years, Houtz, who has offices in Ogden, has failed to support her and left her without a cause. Since Houtz deserted her, she has been living with her father, William H. Howe, in this city. Although Houtz is considered wealthy, Mrs. Houtz did not ask for a division of the property or alimony.

When the case was called before Judge Armstrong, Mrs. Houtz, who is a young and pretty woman, took the witness stand and told of her husband's failures to provide for her. Mr. Howe, her father, corroborated her testimony and the decree was granted. They were married in Salt Lake on Feb. 21, 1903.

REGAINS MAIDEN NAME.

Mrs. Louis A. Nonquier was granted a divorce today by Judge Morse from Joseph Nonquier on the ground of desertion. They were married in Emery county on Aug. 10, 1902. For the past four years, Nonquier refused to live with or provide for her. The court restored her to her maiden name, Louise E. Webster.

COMPLAINTS FILED TODAY.

J. George Barrett, manager of the M. I. A. orchestra, of 107 south Main street, was made the defendant in a suit for divorce today in the Third district court by Mrs. Caroline E. Barrett on the ground of desertion. They were married on Nov. 14, 1906, and have one child, Hazel, 7 months old. For the past year, Mrs. Barrett declares, her husband had refused to provide for her and has lived apart from her without cause. She asks for alimony to support herself and child, attorney's fees and costs of the suit.

On the ground of cruelty, Mrs. Florence Dansie seeks a divorce from James P. Dansie, a locomotive engineer, in an action filed today in the Third district court. They were married on Feb. 19, 1904, and moved to Riverton, Utah. She alleges that he struck here in the face on Nov. 15, 1905, and several months later drove her from his house. Since that time she has been living with her parents in this city. They have one child, Leola, 3 years old, and she asks for the custody of the child and sufficient alimony to support her.

CAUSE OF GREAT DECLINE IN MAY WHEAT

Chicago, March 5.—A decline of 3¼@3⅝c in May wheat on the board of trade today was based largely on reports that the leading long had effected private settlements with shorts. This the latter denied, attributing the drop to lack of demand for cash wheat at principal milling centers.

Reports that the dominant trader was selling some of his heavy holdings through commission houses other than his own also were denied.

"Guess he's shaking out some of the 'trailers,'" was a remark frequently heard on the curb. May wheat dropped to 1.15 today before the market steadied and rallied. This price was 3¼@3⅜c under yesterday's close and 4¼c under the high price of last Wednesday. July wheat at the bottom of today's decline sold at 1.03⅛ or 3½c under the best price of Wednesday.

Lambardi's Singers Capture Salt Lake

"Il Travatore"—The performance of "Il Trovatore" last night was only a repetition of the tremendous success already achieved by the Lambardi opera company.

The plot of this opera is also as familiar to the public as that of "Faust," and does not call for a lengthy description. However, those who wish to thoroughly enjoy grand opera, should before attending the performance become familiar with the theme and the text as well as with the music. In this way they become appreciative listeners.

Grand opera is not intended to be merely an amusement, but a strong educational factor as well, and as such, deserves the serious consideration of all who are interested in the development of a taste for the more refined class of recreation among us. Such music as we have listened to from the Lambardi company cannot fail to be an inspiration to every one who has heard it.

Music students, especially singers who have ambitions along operatic lines, should take advantage of the exceptional opportunity to hear the great masterpieces rendered by such a splendid body of artists, who know how to act and sing and interpret these works as the composer intended they should be given.

In "Il Trovatore," revenge is the principal theme and this idea is strongly developed throughout the entire score.

The scene is laid in Biscay and Aragon, and furnished a vivid picture of the life and character of the people.

The singers were all so splendid that it is difficult to choose the best.

Madam Campoli as "Leonora" gave a good rendition of the part. She has a brilliant soprano voice of great volume and flexibility. Her pianissimo efforts, her artistic phrasing and her gracious personality were fully appreciated by the audience, who rewarded her work with hearty rounds of applause. Her powers were shown to great advantage in the thrilling ensembles. Her work was intelligent and comprehensive throughout.

Signor Pinazzone rendered the role of the "Count" in a most finished style, with a full, rich baritone voice capable of expressing great emotion. Especially pleasing were his solos, "Ah l'amore ond' arde," and "Perem ora fatale." His clear enunciation of the beautiful Italian vowels was a delight to the ear.

Alessandro Scolabrini, as Manrico, was still another surprise to the audience. His work was that of the great artist. His is a wonderful voice, capable of sustaining climax after climax, without showing the slightest strain.

His solo "Ah si ben mio," was full of tender pathos, warmth and beauty of tone.

"Azucena," was magnificently sung and acted by Madam Delorra Frau who seemed to lack nothing in her wonderful delineation of this difficult character.

She invested it with an intensely dramatic power of voice and manner, and her description of the "torture" was a tone picture that held the audience tense and breathless and won her most stormy applause.

In her duet with Manrico in the prison scene, her voice was simply an outpouring of golden tones blending perfectly with the delicious notes of the tenor.

Arthoro Manseri had an opportunity to display the excellent quality of his voice in the role of "Ferrando." His tones are hearty and yet full of melody. He is an actor as well as a singer and does full justice to the work entrusted to him.

Signor Nari was heard in the role of Ruiz, and sang it so well that the audience wished he had more of it to do. His voice is clear and true and he does acceptably all that the role requires.

The chorus work was well done in the "Anvil Chorus." Especially good are the tenors, who sing with a clear, strong tone and plenty of spirit.

But the "Miserere" was sung out of tune which of course marred the effect of the scene.

The orchestra was again under the leadership of signor Jacchia, who has already proven his ability as a conductor in the performance of "Lucia."

The audience, which was a still more representative one than on the first night, was wildly enthusiastic and proved by their applause that Salt Lakers can appreciate grand opera when they have the opportunity.

The company will present "Carmen" tonight with a full cast of artists.

"Faust"—A fair-sized audience attended the matinee yesterday to hear an old time favorite "Faust." While perhaps not equalling in all respects the performance of "Lucia" the previous evening, it was well rendered and much appreciated. The music is so tuneful and full of so many beautiful arias and concerted numbers that the opera will continue in the public favor long after other more pretentious works have been forgotten.

Ester Ferrabini as Marguerite was delightful. This role has been sung by so many artists and in so many different ways, that it would seem almost impossible to introduce any new interpretation of it. And yet Ferrabini sems to have breathed into it a new spirit, and a new conception of its many possibilities. A dainty, girlishness and a simplicity characterized her work and yet the power and forcefulness were not in the least lacking. Her tones were beautifully clear and telling. Her rendition of the "Jewel Song," completely captivated the audience. In the final trio she rose to the great climax as only the true artist can do.

Gerardi Graziani in the title role won hearty applause for his best work, but at times he seemed to be suffering from a cold. He has a good quality of tone, power and temperament but occasionally was inclined to overdo his scenes.

The Mephistopheles of Signor Martino was an excellent performance. Martino's voice is a sonorous bass, superior in quality, well controlled and highly expressive of the demoniacal character he portrays. He is undoubtedly gifted with histrionic powers and does not miss an opportunity to make his part effective. His facial expression added much to the success of some of his scenes.

Angelo Antola as Valentine gave a good account of himself. His voice is ringing and true and his acting, especially in the death scene, was all that it should have been. His appearance as Escamillo in "Carmen" is anticipated with pleasure. Madam Glana as Siebel sang and acted well.

The chorus acquitted itself with credit. The "Soldiers Chorus" particularly was sung with such brilliancy and martial swing that it met with a hearty reception from the audience, which insisted upon an encore.

The orchestra was excellent, under the masterful direction of Edoardo Lebegott whose every gesture spoke volumes to the musicians who played in perfect unison.

EMMA RAMSEY MORRIS.

(A typographical error crept into Mrs. Morris' criticism yesterday on Signor Eugenio Battain's voice, the word "but" being substituted for "not," which made all the difference in the world. At no time was there any indication of flatting on the part of the tenor.)
