

POLICE IGNORE ORDERS OF COURT

Fixes Bail of Prisoner But Blue-coats Release Him on Own Recognizance.

JUDGE BOWMAN SURPRISED.

Club Swingers Pay Little or No Attention to His Findings—Cost of One Chicken.

The police is necessarily a valuable adjunct to the police court room, as it furnishes the grist for the justice mill, and when it does that, Judge Bowman thinks it has done its share, without adding to its burden by trying to turn the wheels or stop them. In other words, Judge Bowman is willing to take part of the work of the mill himself, and then, too, perhaps, he's afraid that the fingers of the police might get caught in the wheels. The court was mildly surprised this morning, then, astonished, and then looked dumb-founded when he discovered that in two instances the police had not only took up the burden of making arrests, but had also relieved the court of work it had already done. The case of Henry Frey was the first surprise. Frey was arrested on a charge of battery, and Judge Bowman fixed his bonds at $100. When he pleaded not guilty and his case was set for July 20, it developed that in spite of the court's order of yesterday the police had been seen by some one and Frey released on his own recognizance.

A second order for $100 bonds was made in his case by the court, and the heels of that discovery it was found that although the bail of P. Grandenette, charged with petit larceny, against whom a bench warrant had been issued, was fixed by the court at $50, he had been released by the police on $25 bail. Now Judge Bowman would really like to know "Why is it?"

COST OF CHICKEN.

After this when P. Grandenette wants something delicate in the way of a meal it will be terrapin, or canvas-back or almost anything but the plain chicken, that is, chicken to anyone but Grandenette, who has found chicken so costly that it put Mrs. Howard Gould's dinners clear over the cliff. "One chicken—$3," is the check to Grandenette—and worse yet, the chicken hasn't been served yet. Grandenette, with his fondness for chicken, chose one from the card of J. S. Nielsen, when Nielsen thought he had none to spare. There was the inevitable argument in which Nielsen had all the best of it, and Grandenette only the best of the jail for depositing $10 bail. Rather than tell his chicken story in jail Grandenette forfeited the $10, but the court wanted to hear the story and ordered a bench warrant issued to bring Grandenette into court and fixed the bail at $50. The police thought half of that was enough, and today again Grandenette had $25 worth of bashfulness. His chicken, which he found he has cost him so far $35, and there may be another charge added, for the court would still like to hear the story.

BOYS BOUND OVER.

John Youngberg, A. Beckstead and William Morgan, the three youths all under the age of 18 years, charged with horse stealing, were bound over to court this morning, and were bound over to the district court, against whom a bench warrant had been issued, was fixed by the court at $50, he had been released by the police on $25 bail. Now Judge Bowman would really like to know "Why is it?"

S. M. DeLozier entered a plea of guilty this morning to the charge of petit larceny. He was arrested upon complaint of John Lolla after he had cashed a spurious check for $50, to which he had forged the name of the Inland Crystal Salt company. Lolla, a Clayton treasurer, he was bound over to the district court for sentence.

Mat Murphy and John Bergstrom, who were taken into custody yesterday afternoon while they were attempting to display four steam valves, pleaded not guilty this morning to the charge of petit larceny and will have their trial July 19. Murphy at the time of his arrest asserted that he had found the valves lying in the roadway, but they were later identified as property stolen from the Sutton company at the new Short Line depot. Bergstrom was with Murphy while he was attempting to sell the valves.

Henry Johnson, only 15 months over from Liverpool, happened to lay off from his work as a bricklayer on a night when he happened to meet five old cronies, and then happened to take "a couple" of drinks. The successive happenings were too much of a strain on Johnson, but he recovered the effort of a night and was discharged in his penitence, and he was evicted.

WHO HIT MIKE MCGANN?

As in the Case of Billy Patterson, Nobody Seems to Know.

The puzzle of "who hit Mike McGann?" over which Asst. County Atty. Rogers played for a couple of hours this morning was a good companion to "Who hit Billy Patterson?" and the answer hasn't been found yet. Although McGann himself was willing to swear, and did swear, that the answer was Martin Ward, even Judge Bowman couldn't guess the riddle, although he worked over it patiently. The puzzle started out with the statement of McGann that on Sunday night, June 6, while he was going home about 11:10 o'clock, he was stopped by Ward, a man named Martin, on West Temple, between North and South Temple. McGann and Ward had been good friends for a long time, and had never had any trouble, while Murphy was yet when the three met, Ward had said to McGann, "Mike I've been waiting for you a while and now I've got you," and emphasized his satisfaction by giving McGann a couple of smacking blows with a "black jack." As McGann went down into slumberland he heard a far, far away voice that sounded like Ward's saying "He's got a wath and chain yet. Get them because he won't need them any more," and the next thing he knew he was at his home with his wife attending to him, but he didn't know how he got there. That was McGann's story, but Ward under a wearisome, but searching cross examination, stuck to his story that the last time he had seen McGann was on that particular Sunday was at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and that he had gone to his room and bed at 10 o'clock that night, over an hour before the assault took place, and his story was corroborated by his landlady. The witnesses all told a straightforward story, were candid in their admissions and under cross-examination—but the only thing the court could determine out of all the straightforward stories was that McGann had been struck, and Ward was discharged.

EVIDENCE OF MURDER NEAR BRIDGEPORT

John Jarvie Missing from His Ranch in Brown's Park—Robbery Probably Motive.

(Special Correspondence.)
ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., July 9.—John Jarvie, an old resident, is believed to have been murdered at his ranch in Brown's park, near Bridgeport, Utah. His son James visited the ranch Wednesday and found blood stains in the yard, and his father missing. The blood stains were followed to the Green river, a short distance away, and it is thought that after killing the old man, who was about 70 years old, his body was placed in the ferry boat, which is also missing, and turned adrift on the river. Jarvie kept a store at his ranch and as he had considerable money on hand at times, it is thought that robbery was the motive of the murder. Rock Springs is much worked up over the affair, and Jarvie's four sons and others are searching for the murderers, who are thought to have gone to Rock Springs from Brown's Park.

UTAH LAKE RECEDING.

Record for Past Year Shows Rise of Over Four Feet.

The Utah lake has reached its highest point, which was 2.91 feet above compromise point, and the waters are now receding. This is the news that has just been received by Secy. George C. Lambert of the Utah lake commission from W. A. Knight, who is in charge of the pumping station at the lake. Mr. Knight says the rise this year was quite steady from Sept. 2, 1908, when it reached its lowest level last year. In the interval between that date and June 24, 1909, the water rose 4.85 feet. The latter states that the rise between October, 1906, and July, 1907, was 4.83 feet, while the rise during the winter of 1907-8 and the following spring was only .38 feet.
