

MOTOR EDUCATION.

The Sixth of Dr. Hall's Lectures Before the Joint County Institute.

The Part that Motor Play has to Perform—Harvard Physical Development of Harvard University, Modern Gymnastics, The Future Manual Training, Science, Motor Education.

Dr. Hall began his sixth lecture before the Joint County Institute.

Twenty-five years ago, I graduated from a famous German university, graduated with that same of scientific and motor play which generally envelopes and exalts the scientific young man on the occasion of his graduation.

There really seemed little else to learn, but nothing is more apt to be learned than the science of motor play, and I am glad to say that I have learned it.

Consider for a moment the part that motor play has to perform in the education of the child.

The question of motor play is not a new one, but it is a new one in its application to the child. The child is not a little man, but a little man who is growing.

It was with such thoughts that I entered upon my investigations. I first discovered that motor play is not a mere amusement, but a serious thing. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.

It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life. It is a serious thing because it is a part of the child's life.
