GEORGE TERRY'S BODY ARRIVES

Funeral at His Old Town of Draper is Scheduled for Today.

SOMETHING ABOUT HIS LIFE.

Was Preparing to Go to Washington On Matters Pertaining to Wind River Indians When Murdered.

It is expected that the body of George Terry who was murdered by unknown parties a week ago, will arrive at Draper, Salt Lake county, in time that the funeral may be held in his home town today. The remains left Lander, Wyo., Tuesday night, accompanied by his wife.

Terry was a half-breed Indian, and was a little over 50 years of age. His father was Joshua Terry of Draper, and his mother was an Indian woman. George resided in this county until after he grew to manhood, when he took up his abode on the Wind River reservation in Wyoming.

It was not the man's Indian instincts that caused him to go to live among a people less civilized than himself. A belief that he could better the condition of the dusky dwellers of the plains, impelled him to give up the society of white people, to forsake the advantages of civilization, and to cast his lot among his mother's folk.

His motive was a worthy one and his labors were a blessing to his fellow men. He lost none of the advantages of civilization, and was associated with his early life, but was surrounded by them in the conditions that surrounded him in his chosen isolation from civilization.

It was such that the minds of his neighbors were gradually drawn from savagery to higher things. Quite a number of the sequel of Caucasian and Christian training upon George Terry in comparison with the story of others of Indian blood who have been feared among white people. Several were known to remain for any length of time after mature years were reached in the home surroundings that were provided for them. Frequent short trips would be taken by the adopted child of the forest, and the time would eventually come when there was no longer a coming of the wanderer, and news would be brought to foster relatives and friends that a wigwam in the desert was more to be enjoyed than any home could be in civilized life.

One case in particular is well remembered by many Utah people. Years ago the late David P. Kimball, reared from infancy to mature life in Indian boy. He grew up to be a splendid specimen of physical manhood, tall, straight of limb, athletic and fine featured. He dressed much tidier than some of the white boys who were his companions, and became quite a Beau Brummel. A few years after leaving his foster parents he was found among the Indians of his nativity and was the dirtiest, meanest and most good for nothing savage of the whole tribe.

MRS. MARGARET YOUNG.
Widow of President Brigham Young Who Died Last Night in the Eighty-Fourth Year of Her Age.

At 6:45 o'clock last evening there passed into the life beyond one of Utah's loved and respected pioneers, Margaret, Pierce Whitesides Young, widow of President Brigham Young. Although she had nearly reached the ripe age of four score years and four, and had been in feeble health for some time, her immediate death was entirely unexpected. Her son, Brigham Morris Young, was in her room but a few minutes before the end came, and found her ready to retire. She expressed herself as feeling quite comfortable, said she had eaten a hearty supper, and did not feel the least ill.

Mr. Young passed into another apartment for a few moments, when upon returning he found his mother feebly in bed, and she was in the arms of death. The end of her mortal life had come. Mrs. Young had been a resident of Salt Lake City since Oct. 2, 1847. A short time previously she had become the wife of President Young, the ceremony being performed at Nauvoo, Ill. She was native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Aston township, April 19, 1822. Her parents, Robert and Hannah Pierce, were Quakers, and Margaret was reared in that faith until the family became Latter-day Saints in 1840.

Mrs. Young was of a refined nature, cheerful in disposition and exceedingly kind and charitable. The aim of her life was to do good and she wielded a marvelous power in alleviating suffering and distress. The son mentioned her only child, but she at various times had several children, many of whom still live to cherish her memory.

The funeral of Mrs. Young will be held Sunday, Jan. 20, in the Emerson meetinghouse, commencing at 11:30 a. m. The chapel is on Emerson avenue, Eleventh East, between Tenth and Eleventh South streets.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF THE high priests of the Granite Stake will convene in the Granite Stake Tabernacle on Sunday, Jan. 20, 1907, at 10 a. m. All of the high priests of the stake are requested to be present as important matters of business will be considered.

JOHN COOK, N. V. JONES, C. L. MILLER, Presiding.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF the officers of the Ensign Stake Primary associations will be held in room 21, Memorial building, L. D. S. university, on Friday, Jan. 18, 1907, at 4 o'clock p. m.
