

FAMOUS SOLDIER HERE NEXT WEEK

Coming of Corporal Tanner, Head
Of the Grand Army of the Republic.

HOW HE LOST BOTH LEGS.

With That Handicap He Became a
Sound Lawyer, Eloquent Speaker
And Strong Man.

"Corporal" Tanner, the present commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, who will arrive in Salt Lake next week, was born in Richmond, Va., on April 4, 1841. His early life was spent upon the farm and his educational privileges were those of the district school.

While a mere boy he taught school, manifesting in this calling the thoroughness and force of will which have since characterized him. At the breaking out of the war for the sup-repose and comforts of a home. He has also been largely instrumental in securing favorable pension legislation by Congress, appearing before the committee of the senate and house, urging with eloquent words the claims of disabled veterans. Touched with a feeling of sympathy for the disabled soldiers who were the gray, he suggested to the philanthropic citizens of Richmond, Va., the erection of a soldier's home in the south, and under his direction a meeting was held in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, which resulted in raising a fund of $1,600, which formed the nucleus of the many thousands which were afterwards secured for the noble purpose.

MADE A TRUSTEE.
Upon the inauguration of the work in Richmond, he was made one of the trustees, but declined the honor. He has thus bound himself to the Blue and Gray alike by indissoluble ties of friendship and love, and his memory will ever be kept green in the hearts of thousands who have been blessed by his efforts.

As a public speaker he has few superiors, being eloquent, logical and witty. In debate he is always self-possessed and meets opponents boldly, having the courage of his convictions.

SQUIRES HIS ADJUTANT.
During the years 1876 to 1877 Corporal Tanner was commander of the department of New York, and Col. George B. Squires, now a resident of this city, was his adjutant general. It was during these two years that the soldier's home was built at Bath. The corporal is now holding by appointment of President Roosevelt the position of register of deeds in the District of Columbia. He will receive a royal welcome at the hands of his comrades in Salt Lake on the occasion of his visit, May 10, and the evening reception to be held at the Commercial club should be thronged by all who love

CLEAN SCOOP OF THE WORLD.

Says This Paper Gave Most Comprehensive Statements and Illustrations of Situation He Has Seen.

Throughout America, most of the pictures being printed of the San Francisco fire are the work of Arthur C. Pillsbury of San Francisco, and the young man seems destined to make a comfortable fortune out of six hours of incessant toil on the day of the quake, and fire. Instead of getting panicky, he got busy, and brought into play all the resourcefulness of six years of newspaper training to "get his story," and after getting it, he has done already over $20,000 worth of business, and is the first young man to rise in fortune since the disaster, on goods produced in the stricken city.

Walter D. Cole, a business partner of Mr. Pillsbury, is in Salt Lake today on his way to Chicago with pictures of the fire, and he tells something of the way young Pillsbury got into action on the morning of the earthquake.

QUICKLY GOT BUSY.
He was a San Francisco boy, who had long been head of the Examiner photographing staff. A month before the fire, he decided working for himself, and he opened a studio at 211 Second street, equipping it with a big panorama machine, and a supply of films, and a number of smaller cameras, for commercial work. Two days before the fire he worked for a long time getting a 24-foot film showing every feature of "Dear Old Frisco" just as it was.

Instantly on feeling the shock, he arose, and, forgetting of the damage to his home, rushed to the ferry and caught the first boat to San Francisco. His offices were on fire when he reached them, but he entered, and snatched up a small panoramic camera, a five by seven kodak, and a supply of films, and with them took the big film on which was printed the panorama of the city as it was.

CHASE BEFORE THE FLAMES.
Then came the chase before the flames, photographing them as they spread onward towards the center of John Ward town. From the top of the St. Francis hotel three films were secured of the sea of flames below, and then suddenly the hotel itself was the center of the fire zone. Pillsbury got away with his films, but had to abandon his camera, and by night time, when he was so exhausted he could not work any longer with his kodak, he made for Berkeley, and established a large dark room there, where through the night he set men to work developing his films. In the morning he opened an office in Oakland, with pictures of the fire for sale, and increased his printing and developing force to 12 men. His partners in the business were notified of his work, and they saw at once the opportunities to be gained, and pictures were sent out all the big American dailies, and to the weekly magazines. Then the lantern slide proposition brought itself to their attention by the offer of $75,000 for the American stereoscopic rights on the films, and this offer was refused.

THE QUEER EFFECTS.
Instead, the force of men was still further increased, and 300 sets of lantern slides were turned out, the material for them being rushed through from Portland and Los Angeles, after the San Francisco supply had been exhausted. Professional men who were burned out, and penniless on account of the fire, became the first agents, and now these men are out in every state of the Union in chase of a stereoscopic abolition, and the burning city, and queer effect of the quake. Mr. Cole will go on east tonight, to attend to business connected with the publication of an illustrated history of the fire, for which some of the best writers of San Francisco have furnished the story to go with the pictures.

PRaise FOR THE "NEWS."
Mr. Cole is enthusiastic in his praise of the way the Desert News has handled the entire San Francisco situation. "In the first place," he declared, "I have never seen newspaper illustrations as well printed, and as clear in detail, as those printed of this fire in the 'News.' Your pictures printed Friday after the fire were a clean scoop of the world, all right, and your Stanford pictures are likewise exclusive, for right after your pictures were taken of those plates, we bought them, and had them copied, and that shut off their use in newspapers, except those we were supplying. Immediately afterwards the ruins were changed greatly by workmen, and permission to enter the ruins to get interior views was refused by the university authorities. Altogether the 'News' has given the most comprehensive statements and illustrations of the situation I have seen so far."

"CORPORAL TANNER"
Head of the Grand Army of the Republic Who is Coming to Attend Utah Encampment of the G. A. R.

pression of the rebellion, he gave up his occupation, and on Sept. 23, 1861, enlisted in company C, Eighty-seventh New York volunteers, for three years.

"IN SEVEN DAYS' FIGHT."

He was soon made corporal, and was in a fair way to further promotion when he was overtaken by a terrible disaster that closed his army career. His regiment was with Phil Kearney's division, and participated in the Peninsula campaign, being engaged in the battles of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, the siege of Yorktown, the "Seven days' Fight," before Richmond and Malvern Hill. After leaving the Peninsula, the Eighty-seventh fought at Warrenton, Bristol station and Manassas Junction.

WOUNDED AT "BULL RUN."

Corporal Tanner served with his regiment in all the above mentioned engagements and was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run. There the Eighty-seventh held the right of line with Stonewall Jackson's corps in front. During a terrific shelling from the enemy, the men were lying down, when a fragment from a bursting shell completely severed the corporal's right leg at the ankle and shattered the left so badly as to make amputation necessary. He was taken from the field in an unconscious condition, and left in a farm house, where the surgeons amputated both legs four inches below the knee. The retreat of the Union forces left him a prisoner in the hands of the enemy. Ten days later he was paroled and taken to Fairfax Seminary hospital, where, after a long struggle, he finally recovered. He returned home and was subsequently appointed door-keeper in the assembly, and held other positions in the legislature. He was afterwards appointed to a clerkship in the war department, under Secy. Stanton, and on the night of Lincoln's assassination he was employed to take notes of the first official edict, and stood beside the bed of the martyr president when he died.

BECAME A LAWYER.

In 1866 he returned to Schoshase county and studied law with Judge William C. Lamont, and was admitted to the bar in 1869. In 1866, while pursuing his legal studies, he married the daughter of Alfred C. White of Jefferson, N. Y. They have four children, namely, Ada, Antoinette, James A. and Earl W.

The corporal was subsequently appointed to a clerkship in the New York custom house, being promoted to deputy collector, and served four years under Chester A. Arthur, who was at the time collector of the port of New York.

FRIEND OF THE DISABLED.
Probably no man in the Grand Army of the Republic has done more to advance its interests or the interests of homeless and disabled veterans than Corporal Tanner. To his efforts, more than to any other man, is due the erection of the Soldiers' Home at Bath, Steuben county, N. Y., where 600 disabled, homeless veterans can find the patriotism and have not forgotten the valor and devotion of the men who were the blue from 1861 to 1865.

PATRIARCH HONORED.
Veteran Resident of Second Ward Celebrates Ninety-first Birthday.

Patriarch Leach of the Second ward was on Thursday night tendered a testimonial of good feeling and love by the residents of the ward designated. The occasion was the ninety-first birthday of the old gentleman.

Most of the old people of the ward were present, each one trying to outvie his neighbor in pleasant words of congratulation and esteem for the veteran who enjoys to the fullest extent the respect of all citizens who know him. An entertaining program was enjoyed, followed by a repast, presided over by 12 young ladies. At the close of the banquet, the ward choir rendered delightful music, which terminated an interesting and enjoyable time.

Speeches eulogistic of the honored veteran, were made by those present. President Joseph F. Smith gave an address full of interest, praising the people for bringing flowers to gladden the heart while the guest of honor was living, instead of waiting until he had gone to the other side. He also commended those present for remembering the life and labors of a worthy citizen when alive. Bishop Iverson acted as chairman and the whole proceedings were a pronounced success.
