

VALUE TO UTAH WILL BE GREAT

W. H. Rowe Talks of This State's Showing at the Seattle Exposition.

MANY AWARDS SURPRISING

Winning of Grand Prize for Seeds
Started California—Some Hints
To Utah's Orchardists.

William H. Rowe, who was director general at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition held during the past summer in Seattle, is now busily engaged here in apportioning the various exhibits, receiving them from the railroad company and closing up the business of the exposition for Utah. Incidentally, to his friends who find him in the midst of his labors, he is enthusiastic over the success of the exposition as far as Utah was concerned, particularly and is eager to tell them concerning it.

"I cannot, and I am sure no one can, estimate the value of the advertising that has come to Utah from her exhibits at the great exposition. One of the features I can never forget was the banquet tendered to Governor Spry and his staff on Utah day in the New York building by the officials of the fair. This was a crowning event for Utah. Notable speeches were made and among the strongest was one by Josiah Collins, chairman of ceremonies for the exposition. Mr. Collins is a widely known Seattle lawyer, a noted speaker in the northwest and a man respected by an unusually wide circle of acquaintances. In his speech on Utah day he said among other things that such national, soldier, achievement or establishment in which it points with greatest pride. England has William the Conqueror, France its Napoleon, Russia has St. Petersburg, and America its Columbus and so on down the line every nation points with great pride to certain persons, events or establishments as typical of the mastery of some great civilization. But the northwest has its Brigham Young," declared Mr. Collins, "and to him I can point as the man who made possible all that now exists in the northwest. Blazing the trails in Utah with a hardy band of pioneers, he stands as the man who faced the great problems of the unsettled country and who has opened the way to the marvelous achievements that now mark the northwest as a land of promise and accomplishment." The speech of Mr. Collins, declared Mr. Rowe, "set the audience to thinking and impressed them with the true meaning of the great pilgrimage to the west made by that determined company of frontiersmen. Dr. John A. Witte of the Agricultural college followed Mr. Collins and he took up the thread of appreciation of the achievements of the pioneers and revealed to the guests present at the banquet a new thought upon the development of the west from the period of the settlement of Utah onward. That banquet was a great affair and its value to Utah cannot be appreciated until its fruits are ripe."

CADETS AND CHOIR.

Mr. Rowe returns loud in his praise of the high school cadets and the Tabernacle choir. These two organizations advertised the state to wonderful advantage. No more orderly, well disciplined, well drilled or select body of men, young or old, was present at the exposition and the advertising they gave for Utah's educational system will surely be lasting. declares Mr. Rowe with emphasis. Mr. Rowe says that there remains much misunderstanding of the incident at the Seattle surrounding the appearance of the choir in the contest to have been held. Still Mr. Rowe believes that the conditions which prevented the concert were all favorable to Utah, and that the result of the incident more good than injury was done. If it had been for the failure of the choir to compete in the contest, the great concert given in the amphitheater would never have been given. The concert, given jointly with Kibbey's band, was attended by 35,000 people and the impression was so great that the officials of the Utah exhibit were compelled to hold open house at the Utah building until midnight to receive the visitors to the building who were all eager to shower their congratulations on the singers and any one from Utah, to whom they seemed to feel that they owed a debt.

The unique Utah building, patterned after the homes of the Hopi Indians, a once extinct race centuries, was favorably commented upon by all who visited it. The souvenir concentrates given away at the exhibit of the university school of mines were eagerly sought for and the copper medallions made from Utah copper, were demanded on every hand. It was at the Utah building that souvenirs were free to all visitors. At the other buildings many articles being offered for sale as a means of partly defraying the expenses of the exhibit. This was a fact commented upon by many visitors with decided approval and, in the opinion of Mr. Rowe, went far toward showing that in Utah a spirit of liberality prevails, and that mercenary ideas hold no place in its makeup.

UTAH'S EXHIBITS.

In the Utah building the interior was so arranged that all the exhibits might be seen at a glance, no obstructing being in evidence. The building was adapted to its purpose admirably. The mineral exhibit was one that occasioned much favorable comment. It was an exhibit in which those unacquainted with minerals might delight as well as the man versed in the subject. Each exhibit was labeled and was an open book to the beholder. Knowledge was acquired from the exhibits in the world in viewing it had only words of praise for it. That it took the grand prize was no surprise, as it was commended on all sides that it was entitled to it.

The surprise of the fair came when Utah was awarded the grand prize for seeds as against California. The quality of the Utah-grown seeds, in their germinating power was described as remarkable by visitors to the fair who watched the process of the judging. Peaches and grapes were shipped to the fair from St. George on the north to Richham City on the north, and the excellence of the exhibit was a marvel even to people from Utah. Gold medals and grand prizes captured in this department were numerous and the best only credit upon those engaged in selecting the exhibits. The award to Utah of the prize for cherries on cherry day at the fair was also a surprise to many delegations.

Mr. Rowe returns loud in his praise of the work of Prof. Fred N. Poulsen, director of the educational exhibit for Utah. His work was most favorably commented upon by visitors. The manual training exhibits from the Agricultural college, the L. D. S. university and the public schools of the state were objects of special praise from educators and visitors in general, and went far toward securing the recognition which finally came to Utah in many awards.

PRIZE FROM PRESIDENT.

Director General Rowe cherishes among his fondest memories of the fair the fact that he was selected as a member of a small committee which formed a part of the escort to President Taft while he was at the fair. The close association which came to Mr. Rowe as a member of this committee in his relations with the president and his party brought him a new reverence for the head of the nation and for President Taft as a citizen of the nation. Being with him all through the days of his visit at the fair, Mr. Rowe obtained a close view of the man and his outward manifestations of his inner self. "A great big man in every sense that the word can convey," is his impression of President Taft. In his visit to the Utah building the president expressed to Mr. Rowe his appreciation of the display afforded and spoke feelingly of the reception accorded him in his stay in Salt Lake and other Utah cities.

The Utah manufacturers won high praise with their exhibits and among them none attracted more attention than the exhibit of the Utah-Idaho sugar company, an exhibit showing all the phases of the production of sugar from beet to sack. This exhibit included handsome photographs of the various plants of the company, and an attendant was on hand at all times to intelligently acquaint visitors with the history of the sugar industry in Utah and Idaho and to discuss with them the various processes concerned in the making of the finished article. The award made to Utah manufacturers went far to swell the list of Utah's prizes—a list that compares more than favorably with those of any other state.

Mr. Rowe before he returns to Utah visited the famous fruit growing valleys of the northwest including the Yakima and Hood River valleys. No investment in those valleys promises such returns as may be realized in Utah, declares Mr. Rowe. Fruit and stock raising in the remarkable soil, climate and irrigation will yield double what any of the valleys visited by Mr. Rowe will. Water rights in Utah are sold, he says, for far less than similar rights in any other part of the United States.

There is one thing, however, which, in Mr. Rowe's opinion, Utah fruit growers can learn with profit from the growers of the fruit growing states. The value of proper thinning of orchards, spraying and cultivation. Packing, too, is an important item in the fruit growing industry, and Mr. Rowe declares that if the people will be as much interested in their produce as they are in their profits will run far higher than they do now.

KILLS HER FOE OF 20 YEARS.

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything I am 70 years old and am overjoyed to get my health and strength back again." DRIEST SEASON EVER IN AMERICAN SAMOA

Tutuila, Oct. 12, via San Francisco, Nov. 12.—This year has proved the driest ever known in American Samoa. The total rainfall will not exceed 120 inches. Last year's rainfall was 230 inches. The annual has been so insufficient here and in German Samoa that pasture, plantations and the water supply systems have been affected considerably. In American Samoa a war famine has threatened at times. The United States steamer Annapolis probably will visit Auckland, N. Z., late this year for docking and repairs and to afford a change of climate for the crew and officers of the vessel. Prof. Henry E. Crampton of Columbia university, accompanied by his family, is returning to the United States via Sava, Fiji. Prof. Crampton has been actively engaged in biological studies in the islands for several weeks.

AUTOMOBILE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

Chicago, Nov. 12.—With intent to aid in enforcing existing laws governing the driving of automobiles and the prosecution of reckless chauffeurs, the Auto Drivers' Protective association was organized last night with 150 members. The association plans to make war against reckless drivers. At the meeting wealthy owners of machines rubbed elbows with professional chauffeurs while casting their ballots. The association, which it is believed, will have for its members before long all the capable automobile drivers in the state, will give legal aid to all of its members when arrested and medical attention when ill or suffering from injury.

MODEL OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA EXHIBITION

Washington, Nov. 12.—A model of the new battleship South Carolina, one of the all-big-gun vessels of the navy, was placed on exhibition yesterday in the corridor of the navy department. It is the first of the new battle ships to wear the blue and white paint which has been adopted by the department. The model is also distinctive because it has two of the new style military masts now being installed on the battleships of the navy. It attracted a great deal of attention among naval officers and other visitors to the building.
