CHICAGO, Dec. 18 .- The four anarhists who were hanged Nov. 11, August Spies, A. C. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, and George Engel, and Louis Lingg, who cheated the gallows by committing suicide the day before, were placed in their final resting place in Waldheim cemetery today. The only dramatic feature of the occasion was brought about by Mrs. Parsons, the dusky wife of the dead anarchist. She had kept in the background at the cemetery during the preliminary services, and a few mements before Captain Black, chief counsel for the anarchists, concluded his address and while the spectators were in a manner by the captain's rhetoric, some one shouted "Make way for Mrs. Parsons." A passage way was made and Mrs. Parsons, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Holmes, came forward. The nearest coffin to her was that of August Spies, her husband's was second from this. Mrs. Parson's eyes seemed to pick out the casket in which she was most interested. The moment her gaze caught it, she gave voice to a wail which startled the crowd. Captain Black paused in his speech, then came screams from Mrs. Parsons which reached to the outer circle of the crowd. Thrice she strove to speak but the words refused to

The two funeral trains from the city the two luneral trains from the city carried about 800 people to the cemetery. The demeanor of the occupants partook more of the nature of a picnic party than a funeral. At the ceremony the crowd gathered around a lot situated near the entrance. The coffins were taken from the vault and carried to the anot where the crowd had see to the spot where the crowd had as-sembled. Spies' body was born by six members of the Turn Verein. Fischer's

On Spies' and Fischer's coffins were On Spies' and rischer's comms were flowers and red ribbons, on Parsons' was a bouquet of red and yellow roses, which served to bring out in bold relief the red cloths which covered the caskets of Engel and Lingg. The undertakers removed the lids from the coffins and the chief mourners took heir places. Among the chief mourn-wherever civilization has shed its light. Whatever may be our personal views of Christ we all know that He brought most prominently to light twe thoughts which have been in the world since then. One establishes a connection in the relationship between us and eternal good, the other is the thought of universal brotherhood, for if we only knew it the events and circumstances of to-day are yet children of the infinite bound up in an eternal destiny. As children of one father we are brethren all. No man until the are brethren all. No man until the coming of Jesus knew the secret which

NARROW BARRIERS Him. In the stable was His birth and in the manger was His cradle. What shall I say concerning the civilization which boasts His name today? As we look back over the long ages that have occupied these nineteen centuries, we can take heart and courage that His dectrine and love is yet alive, for in spite of much forgetting we still find in the long march of the centuries that there have been faithful hearts in which with the ages have come to life the beauty and plery of His teachings—self-sacrifice, fraternity and love. But it is not all that places of power and of wealth had no room for Him when He came, but when he went what was it? He taught the world a divine father-of fatherhood were added to the teaching of the universal brotherhood of all mankind, the Pharisees and priests, scribes and Levites combined with one accord to send him to a faloa's death. He taught practical fraternity. Thus it is to study the welfare of the poor and oppressed rather than a principle made for advantage and profit, and for this they cast Him out. Bft the cross upon which they hanged ithim became a synonym of honor and glory. My friends, has the world yet reached its nitimate of purpose, its highest of honor and of development? Look on these dead and answer. Whatever you may say as to their methods, the jugdment of simple justice is that their purpose was the

with their longing to bring in a day of universal brotherheod and universal peace, and the world has nothing for these men but the gibbet. We take these lessons to heart, but do not despair, for we know that the cause for which men die takes root in the human heart and reaches upward and spreads and cannot be destroyed, and the lesson of this hour was given us in words that the great Teacher spoke in centuries agone. When seeing the gathering storm of hatred and oppression which was speedily overwheiming Him, He realized that in leyalty to the mission He had accomplished upon earth, there was a felon's fate for Him, there was overthrow and destruction.

FATE OF OBLIVION?

The lives that go out in a splendid service and in supreme sacrifice are never lost. I care not what their beliefs are concerning the unseen, I know that even if they believe not, the Eter-nal Father is faithful and that the hearts that pass out of life in the service of humanity will be called and gathered into the embrace of God." After Captain Black's address Paul Grottkan, of Milwaukee, delivered a long speech in German, in which he said: "I read that the thoughts of this as-of the wounded and property-owning class furnished the material for a charge against these our friends, and that you live in the conviction that their crime was a love of truth, that the crime which they were charged with was to have striven for the liberty of man."

Albert Currlin, of St. Louis, also de-livered a speech in German praising the virtues of the dead anarchists and the cause for which they died. After the ceremonies were over, the caskets were closed and lowered in the grave which had been dug twelve feet deep and walled up with granite blocks. Just before the gravite capstone was placed on the grave, two large wreathes ordered by the New York Freiheit, John Most's paper, were placed in the grave.

Scella on the occasion of her own jubilee. The Pope said that he was deeply moved by these proofs of friendship on the part of the Queen and hoped the -xchange of sentiments of affection would not be limited to the present exceptional circumstances but would also make its influence felt on other occasions. He was animated, he said, by feelings of the greatest affection for the English people. The Pope recalled the friendship displayed by Queen Victoria in 1864, when at the conclusion of the nunciature at Brussels he delivered to her a letter from King Leopold.

THE LAST SPIKE

On the California & Oregon Road Driven Yesterday. ASHLAND, Oregon, Dec. 17 .- The California & Oregon Railway was completed today. This event represents twenty-one years of railway construction, almost steadily pushed though the project of surmounting the mountain ranges of northern California and southern Oregon forced stoppages, and created for a period the impression that this latest, and, in many respects, most important of the national highways, might never be completed. The accomplishment un-doubtedly is regarded by the commer-cial circles of the coast as the MOST IMPORTANT in its significance since the completion of the first overland railway system in May, 1869. It affords for the first time an all-rail communication between the cities of the Pacific, from the south of the union, and place under the control of one railroad correction as unpreken line from New Orland the control of the c leans to Portland, Oregon, a distance of 3,000 miles. From a strategic standpoint, the completion of the northern link is of vital importance to the national government as a defensive measure in case of war, and for the rapid concentration of troops. Yesterday afternoon a special train left San Francisco carrying Charles Crocker as chief representative of the Southern Pacific system and Mr. Wm. H. Mills and Mr. Richard Koehler, also

We here now upon our own soil, bid you a right hearty welcome to Oregon, coming as you do to celebrate the completion of the railroad which will nereafter bind more closely the people of California and Oregon. The avenues thus opened should be for the mutual benefit of those who build them as well as those who patronize them, lation they can be. When Governor Pennoyer coucluded, Joseph Teffeno, president of the Sac-ramento Board of Trade, spoke in be-half of the State of California, in the
