THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINA
THON.

Conkling's View.

New York, 5.— Ex-Senator Conkling, being asked his opinion of the situation and the way some of the newspapers are disposed to treat it, said: "The assault on President Garfield is astounding. The shot fired by the madman is shot fired at all of us. No language can overestimate the enormity of the deed. There is, however, no occasion for public apprehension or excitement. Our fathers foresaw even such dire calamilies and provided for them. The Constitution points out just calamities and provided for them. what shall be done in just such emergency. The Vice-President, on the death of the President, instautly succeeds him, and the government goes on as if no change had occurred. In this case, the Viceoccurred. In this case the Vice-President is an upright, bold and an able man, abundantly qualified for the great trust which Providence unspeakably wicked, and no patriot, whatever his politics, can do anything now till the shadow passes diate and full report regarding the by, but bear up the hands of the Vice-President. He will have the prayers of all good men and women. The assassination, whether by pistol or newspaper, will be stamped out by the American people with righteous and indignant accord. There being no President of the Senate and no speaker of the House, the Vice-President is the one safe-guard and reliance of the country against a great emergency. The Vice-President must be a man who would decrease the danger or pertubation at such a time. Sad and deplorable as the crime is, it is to the glory and safety of our free institutions that no madman's action can reach beyond the individual at whom he aims. The government belongs to the people and will go on peacefully, even in a trial like this. Grief and horror must pervade all hearts meanwhile, as when says: "You keep heart; I have not it. The train was ignorant of it. The train was going at terrific permitted and terrific it. The train was going at terrific it. The New York postmaster is informed by telegraph of the money order from that city and steps will be taken there at once to hunt up Bryan and ascertain what relation he had with Guitteau, and how he came to send him $25. She states that the President passed as comfortable a night as could be expected of a man in such a critical condition. No messages have yet arrived from any ea binet officers, nor have any been dispatched from the White House with tidings to them, although Secretary Lincoln specially requested information respecting the President's condition at an early hour.

Washington, 5.—Col. Crump, who is constantly beside the President, waiting upon him, says he suffers a great deal of pain and that the pain is incessant. The President is restless and feverish, and frequently asks to be moved from one side of the bed to the other, and to have his position changed. He frequently expresses a slight moan from the suffering. He is careful to give no signs of suffering when any of his family are present. Doctor Bless said about 11 o'clock that it is impossible to tell just when Blies said about 11 o'clock that it is impossible to tell just when the crisis begins, or where it ends. The President may continue in about the present condition for some days. Knowledge of the course of the ball is so incomplete that it is not known precisely where the injuries are and therefore the effects cannot be calculated with any certainty. Dr. Bliss is much gratified at the signs of improvement and Washington, 5.—Colonel Rockwood, who spent last night with the President, went home this morning to get some rest. As he passed out of the White House his face showed hopes high in the breast. Thank God, I believe the worst is over and the President will live. I was with his story, and says whether or the better is most decided and inspires his friends with hope almost amounting to enthusiasm.

Colonel Corbin, who has been a close watcher by the bedside, said at noon: I believe the President will live. Everything looks brighter now, and we pray there may not be a change for the worse.

"Yesterday noon, but we thought best not to tell you. The news was not so favorable as to day," was the reply. "You were very thoughtful; I am glad you did not tell me. Bryan, and was for twenty-five dollars. The superintendent of the money office remembers Guitteau distinctly as being in the office several times of late, and thinks he must have received other orders under a different name. Last night the post office officials were positive that not less than three or four meney orders had been received by Guitteau in the past few weeks, but they could not then make an investigation, as it was a holiday, and the clerks having charge of the records his proper name could be found and but no letter written in friendly To Yoshido, Japanese Minister, President is an upright, bold and an able man, abundantly qualified for the great trust which Providence may have in store for him.
