A young man named John Dunn met with a sudden death to-day in a singular manner. He was employed by J. M. Eckfeld & Co., dealers in wire goods, at 412 Clay St., and was descending the staircase with a roll of wire upon his shoulder, when he slipped and fell. In the descent one end of a wire pierced his forehead about the centre, and entered his brain between five and six inches. The injured boy was taken up in an insensible condition and placed in a wagon to be conveyed to the residence of his aunt, who resides at the corner of Howard and Hubbard streets, but he expired before reaching that locality.

He is thought to be a discharged soldier or deserter.

BOSTON, 12.—Some of the crew of the whaler Ansel Gibbs before reported wrecked in the Arctic Ocean, were found and brought to New Bedford, in the whaling schooner Abbie Bradford. They have reached Boston and tell a horrible story of their sufferings and torture by the officers of the Ansel Gibbs. They say that owing to neglect to provide suitable provisions the crew were attacked with scurvy. They were terribly beaten by the captain and first mate, and after the vessel was wrecked ten men died of scurvy, and those were foremost in protesting against their ill treatment were left on an island, the captain of the Abbie Bradford refusing them passage.

NEW YORK, 13.—The Herald's special gives additional particulars of the assassination of Gen'l McCook. In the early part of Thursday evening McCook and Wintemute had an altercation in the St. Charles Hotel, when the latter insulted McCook, who resented the insult by punishing Wintemute severely. After they were separated Wintemute was covered with blood from his face, and went out of the house, while McCook went to his room. At this time Wintemute remarked to those around him, "He can whip me, but I can shoot." Wintemute went to the court room, of the hotel, and stationed himself near the entrance. McCook soon passed through the entrance to attend a meeting, and as he did so, Wintemute rose to his feet, drew a revolver, and advancing, took deliberate aim and fired, the shot taking effect in the left breast, passing under the collar bone and out under the shoulder blade, severing a vital artery in its course. No sooner had the assassin fired than McCook dashed upon him, seized him and threw him violently to the floor. In the melee which followed, and before the combatants were separated Wintemute's pistol was discharged three times. The affair has created a profound sensation and aroused a feeling of condemnation, which has taken the best efforts of Governor Bourbank and his immediate friends to control. The city is shrouded in gloom, flags are at half mast, and sorrow is pictured on every countenance. Wintemute is forty-five or fifty years of age, and was a bitter enemy of McCook, the latter having been appointed to a position to which Wintemute was aspirant. McCook was thirty-eight or thirty-nine years of age, and the youngest son of the famous fighting McCook family of Ohio. His remains were sent to Cincinnati by the twelve clock train on Friday night. Wintemute is now under arrest and is quartered at McCook's hotel.

Prof. Donaldson says it is impossible to repair the damages to the balloon. Parties have proposed to Prof. Wise to construct a silk balloon for him, as early as possible, at a cost of $12,000. The trip is to take place about the middle of October. An entirely new plan in inflation and construction will be adopted. The balloon will measure 80 by 90 feet. It is understood that the balloon is on the Montgolfier principle, but will be inflated by a chemical apparatus.

There was a pressure to sell stocks this a.m., and the street was in a flurry of excitement upon the announcement of the suspension of Messrs. Kenyon, Cox & Co., 31 Wall St. This firm has been considered the most sound on the street, and well known as the bankers of Daniel Drew. The heaviest sales in Wall Street were made yesterday and during the past week were made by knowing ones, who discredited the tidings of their difficulty, which does not lie in stocks or stock speculations. The line which they have been carrying is lighter than it has been for some time, and the real difficulty lies in loans made to the Canada Southern railroad, and the failure of negotiations, which have been some time pending in England, by which the road was to have been able to pay off their indebtedness to Kenyon, Cox, & Co.

A Herald special from London, Sept. 13, says the London Times, in its issue to-day, treats the subject of Caesarism in America editorially, using the argument that a change in the Presidency of the U. S. would be a great reform, and might be welcome to the people, if possible, as a means of effecting the extinction, in America, of the system of the constant re-election of the executive, and its attendant evils, inasmuch as the present plans have failed to secure to the community the benefits which were expected from it, as it involves the presence of evils greater than those which it was framed to prevent. There can be no doubt that the election of President Grant to a third term of office may have important consequences not intended by those who have suggested it. A third Presidential term may be followed by a fourth, and the lease of power may be again renewed until terminated by the failing health or the termination of the life of the holder of office. In way the American President may be elected for life, and his re-election at the end of each four years be merely nominal, as a safeguard against the perpetration of any scandalous abuse of power. This would be a great and important change, and one that would not fail to largely influence the general state of politics in America. It would be likely to secure to the people of the U. S. the service of better men, and would render the process of their appointment to office less degrading to themselves, and all concerned in it. The Times says the details of an American presidential election are received on this side of the Atlantic with amusement and disgust, and there are many evidences which go to show that they are looked on in much the same way in America. It would be worth while to try a plan, which could do little harm and might do much good. It is the simplest plan of reform which was ever carried out or suggested.

The Sunday Mercury, in an article to-day, on the present financial condition of New York, claims that the debt of this city amounts to $170,000,000. This includes claims against the city amounting to near $5,000,000, most of which are now in litigation. According to these figures the increase of debt since Comptroller Green resumed office, in October 1871, amounts to $36,000,000.

Several new facts have been developed in connection with the extensive forgeries on the bonds of the Buffalo and Erie and New York C. R. R. It is now stated that about fifteen persons are known to be implicated in the forgeries, and the loss is more than at first stated. It is believed that nearly a million dollars in spurious bonds has been placed on the market here and in Europe within the last year. One banking house in Wall street is reported to have been duped into taking $115,000. The detectives have but slight hopes of making any additional arrests, as the forgers learned too soon of the discovery of their fraud and fled. Yates and Brown, who are under arrest, were believed not to be the principals in the forgeries, but merely accessories.

The agricultural report for the months of August and September will be sent to the printers this week. The returns given show the yield of cotton for the season will approximate to four million bales. In some portions of the cotton region considerable damage has been done by rain, but that loss is overcome by a higher average in sections more favorably circumstanced. The wheat crop is fully up to the average of former years, being estimated at 250,000,000 bushels. The showing is most favorable in Minnesota.

ST. LOUIS, 14.—Considerable interest has been displayed in sporting circles over the McCook and Allen fight, which will positively take place on the 23d inst. Both men are in fine condition, and earnest, and each is confident of winning the fight.

R., early last Friday morning, at a point a mile east of Belleville, by placing a rail on the track. PERSONAL.—Captain Norton came in from Montana last evening and started east this morning. The Captain is a well known mining operator, and owns one of the most productive mines in Montana. Speaking of home matters he said that a big Indian scare occurred the day before he left. A party of Sioux entered the Crow Reservation, near Fort Ellis, and killed a Spaniard by the name of Jose, and a miner, Noyes by name. They drove off a number of cattle and horses and created a general alarm among the settlers. A company of cavalry from Fort Ellis went in pursuit of them. Speaking of hard times, Capt. Norton said a more distressed country than Montana could scarcely be imagined; that it seemed as if there were scarcely ten dollars in the whole Territory. Merchants had given up in despair in many places, and that what few goods they did sell were sold on credit. The coming winter will evidently go hard for Montana, for the season just closing has been anything but propitious.—Corinne Reporter, September 12.

A COLORADO VOLCANO.—A volcano sensation is going the rounds of the press, started by the Central City (Col.) Register, concerning the bursting forth of a new volcano, in the crater of a pre-historic and extinct volcano, and near the edge thereof, a few miles north of Central City. The young volcano gave an occasional spasmodic spurt, and in the intervals smoked away as quietly as an old devotee of the pipe and the Indian weed.

In many places in the Rocky Mountains, especially toward the Colorado river, are unmistakable evidences of fierce volcanic action in the long, long ago.
