

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

CORRESPONDENTS writing for publication are requested to write on one side of the paper only. No notice can be taken of communications unless they are accompanied by the name and address of the contributor, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of reliability.

THEATRICAL.—This evening the closing performance of Cinderella will be given. Those who have not seen this beautiful spectacle should not miss this opportunity; while many will not doubt go who have seen it, that they may enjoy another sight of its beauties and the excellent music which abounds through it.

WHOSE FAULT.—Complaint has reached us from our subscribers at Fort Herriman, that their papers do not reach with regularity, and sometimes not at all. We have inquired of our mailing clerk, who says they are regularly mailed. We have asked Mr. Swann, at the post office here, who says if the dates of the mailing papers are furnished him, on the dates when the papers do not reach, he will trace the matter. With our Herriman friends note the dates when their papers do not reach in time, and inform us, that the fault may be remedied.

TRAIN IV.—Bro. Dunford & Sons' first train arrived this morning freighted with hats, boots and shoes. New goods are arriving pretty nearly every day, to stock the depleted shelves of our merchants.

BURT.—There was quite a busy air on the "street" to-day, and everybody seemed to have reached that happy point when they say "something to do." Business begins to look up.

WILD BEES.—Now that summer has come, our bee-hunters are out hunting in the mountains for the honey bee, and are meeting with very fair success. We hear of several deposits that have been discovered this week, and among others, two immense swarms in the Cañon Canyon, by Mr. James Brown. Less than ten years ago, there was not a swarm of bees in the country, and now the valley and mountains are full of them. (See Bernardino Guardian.)

GREEN RIVER.—The Reese River Revue makes extracts from a letter written to Austin from Green River City, on the 5th inst., which mentions the discovery of coal in that region, and has the following concerning the place from which the letter is written:

"This town has a population of about 1,000 inhabitants, and is about eight miles from a river. It is a whisky mill. They have a pleasant way of entering a bar-room and shooting the necks of the bottles, and it is about the roughest place I was ever in."

SOMETHING NEW.—The San Bernardino Guardian comes to us with a new thing in advertising, in the shape of a photograph neatly made and pasted in the paper. There is an idea for our business men that the photographs of the city would not object to seeing practically acted upon.

A SHARPEN.—The St. Joseph Pindoor requests the newspapers through the country to call attention to the Sharpen, a small, cheap, and useful instrument, which is a new and improved version of the old-fashioned razor, and is a very useful and useful instrument.

J. P. MUEHLBERG.—A first-class printer, a German or Prussian by birth—speaks the English language fluently, but is not a native speaker. He is about thirty-five years of age, five feet seven inches high, well shaped, and of a pleasant countenance. He has a pleasant way of entering a bar-room and shooting the necks of the bottles, and it is about the roughest place I was ever in.

SAW A SPECIMEN.—We saw a specimen this morning, of the metal that came from that "gold discovery" in Echo. It was a ten dollar gold piece, and good enough for the finder to want more of them. It was found by a son of Brother James Snarr, of the Sixth Ward.

SWEDISH BREAD.—Brother John Swenson showed us this morning a piece of bread that he had received in a letter, from North Sweden, where the people have suffered so much for a length of time from famine. It was a little thicker than a thick wafer, of a yellowish green color, and made from pea vines, which were dried, chopped fine, then ground and baked. Great must be the distress of a people who are reduced to eat such miserable stuff to sustain life.

GOOSEBERRIES.—We saw a handsome specimen of the English loquat gooseberry to-day, raised by Mr. Eisebeck in this city, which weighed 13 and 4 grains. Gooseberries are very successfully cultivated in our Territory.

ANOTHER PONY RACE.—There was another race between the "Ponies" of Wells, Fargo & Co., and the Pacific Express Co., from Reno to Virginia City, Nevada, on the 11th. There was much excitement and a good deal of betting on the occasion. Wells, Fargo & Co.'s "Pony" had 200 yards the start at Reno, and was beaten to the first station some 500 yards by the Pacific "Pony." The latter company appears to have lost ground by having too many changes of horses; and Wells, Fargo & Co.'s man won the race, making the distance—22 miles—in 54 minutes! The time made by the Pacific man was 61 minutes!

THE CENTRAL R. R.—Strenuous efforts are being made to rush this line along so as to keep pace with the U. P. R. R., though its chances are small to do so. The Virginia Treasurers of the 11th says:

"The Central managers are pushing things with wonderful energy. The road is constantly lined with long trains heavily laden with materials for the road. The other day, a train of sixty cars, with three locomotives attached, passed to the front. The company seems to be exceedingly iron and other material forward with all possible dispatch, so that, should a landslide or other accident occur to check transportation, the work of construction will not be compelled to stop. It is the intention to get iron on this side for the entire road to Salt Lake before the Fall snows shall set in. Meantime, Reno begins to look with jealous eye upon Wadsworth; and Wadsworth, scarcely reached, looks longingly ahead at the passing trains—as one who waits at a way-station where the cars stop for a while, and then make but one more trip to Reno, then a few weeks will start from Gravelly Ford."

DISCOVERY OF POMPEII.

During a period of seventeen hundred and sixty-nine years Pompeii remained buried and forgotten. In the year 1502, an architect, named Domenico Fontana, cut a subterranean canal under the site of the city for the purpose of conveying water from the river to the town of Torre dell'Annunziata. In constructing this canal, the workmen came upon the foundations of buildings; but no curiosity appears to have been excited, and no steps taken to prosecute further researches. Nearly a hundred years later, fresh rains were discovered, and an inscription with the word Pompeii was even then failed to awake any practical interest. At length, when the accidental discovery of Herculaneum had drawn the attention of learned and scientific men to the subject, Alcibiade, a Spanish Colonel of Engineers, who had been employed to examine the subterranean canal, was led, by the discovery of a house, with statues and other objects, "to conjecture that some ancient city lay buried there, overwhelmed by the great eruption of Vesuvius in 79." Having obtained permission from Charles III., king of Naples, he commenced early in the year 1748 the excavations of the street afterward called the Strada della Fortuna. His labors were soon rewarded, for in a few days he discovered "the picture eleven palms long by four and a half palms high, containing festoons of eggs, fruits and flowers, the head of a man, large, and in good style, a helmet, an owl, various small birds, and other objects." The next discovery of importance was the skeleton of a man, covered with the lava mud. By his side were found eighteen brass coins, and one of silver. Before the end of the first year of the excavations, the amphitheater, which is capable of holding ten thousand persons, was laid bare. The operations, however, were carried on with deplorable dilatoriness, and the royal exchequer was by no means liberal. The excavators, who worked in chains, were chiefly condemned felons or Mohammedan slaves. No stranger was permitted in the ruins. Accurate records of the discoveries were kept; the most important pictures were detached from the walls, after copies of them had been taken; and the buildings in which they were found were again covered with the rubbish. When some progress had been made in the excavations, strangers were admitted on the payment of an exorbitant fee; but all attempts to take copies of mosaics were rigorously discouraged.

The short period during which the French occupied Naples was distinguished by a more liberal and enlightened policy. Under the patronage of Caroline, the wife of Murat, the works were carried on with great vigor, and many remarkable discoveries were made. The amphitheater, which had been filled again, was cleared; the forum was laid open; and the greater portion of the Street of Tombs was uncovered. The return of the Bourbons to favor was not conducive to the progress of the excavations. The revolution which drove them finally from Naples gave Pompeii another chance. Garibaldi was appointed dictator. But, however brave and patriotic as a General, he was scarcely fitted for the functions of administration. He gave the dictatorship of masonry and excavations to Alexander Dumais, the French novelist. The new director was quite alive to the dignity of his position, and kept it up with princely magnificence. But he had no notion of his responsibilities. It is said that he paid but one visit to the ruins. His rule was happily short lived; for, on the accession of Victor Emmanuel to the throne of Italy, Giuseppe Pierrel, a distinguished antiquarian scholar, was appointed director-general of the works. The appointment has proved most judicious. Pursuing a regular system, nothing "every appearance of fragment which might afford or suggest a restoration of any part of the buried edifice, replacing with fresh timber every charred beam, propping every tottering wall or portion of brick-work." The new commendatore has succeeded in exhibiting not a confused and undefined mass of crumbling ruins, but a town in the integrity of its outlines and the order of its arrangement. Streets after streets have been uncovered. Temples, baths, markets, tombs, stand out just as they stood sixteen hundred years ago. The villa of the poet, the forum, the counting-house, the baker's shop, the school-room, the kitchen, carry us into the very heart of Roman life in the brightest days of the empire. The jewelry of beauty, the spade of the laborer, the fetter of the prisoner, and the weapon of the soldier, are all there, revealing and calling to the past the vividness the scenery is conceived.

Pompeii, overwhelmed, and, as it were, hermetically sealed in the very heart of its proper position, preserved from the ravages with which Gothic and Vandals visited the ancient glories of Italy, and from the scorplings and almost total destruction which modern lands—brings the past to our very doors. Within its silent streets are buildings as they were originally designed, not altered and patched to meet the exigencies of newer fashions; the paintings undimmed by the tedious touch of time; household furniture left in the confusion of new articles, even of intrinsic value abandoned in the hurry of escape, yet safe from the robbers, or scattered about as they fell from the trembling walls, which could not be of stoop for its most valuable possessions; and in some instances, the bones of the inhabitants, bearing testimony to the suddenness and completeness of the calamity which overwhelmed them. These are the very things which were made by the wheels of chance, flying, perhaps, from the impending ruin. There are water pipes, in the cavities of which, sealed by the hand of time, the splashing fluid can still be heard. There are the bones of a child, who, perhaps, was playing with a ball, when the catastrophe overtook him. There is a skeleton of a man, who, perhaps, was drinking at the counters of a drinking shop, when the apocalyptic still, containing the fluids which he was drinking, fell upon him, and he was overwhelmed by a perfect, may yet be seen. There are vases, with olives still swimming in oil, and fruit retaining its flavor, and the oil burning in the lamps, and the flames of the lamps, on which are piled stores of figs, raisins, and chestnuts, and there are amphore, containing the wines for which Campania was famous.

About one-third of the city has been disinterred. In this portion some six or seven hundred skeletons have been found. It is reasonable to suppose that, if the whole city were disinterred, the number of skeletons would be about two thousand. But Pompeii contained at least twenty thousand inhabitants.—Exc.
