CHILD FALLS TO ITS DEATH.

Baby Boy of Mr. and Mrs. Alma Peterson of Huntsville Breaks Its Neck.

HEARINGS IN DISTRICT COURT.

Ed. Pennell Pleads Guilty to Burglary and is Sentenced to Two Years—Other Cases.

Ogden, Dec. 13.—A distressing and sad accident occurred at Huntsville, Weber county, Monday night, when Eugene, the little 15-months-old baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. Alma Peterson fell from the cradle and was instantly killed. Mrs. Peterson had retired Monday night, placing little Eugene in the cradle, where he usually slept, she had a little girl in bed with her. A short time after going to bed Mrs. Peterson was awakened by a noise. She quickly lit the lamp and picked the little boy up. Realizing that he was seriously hurt as he did not make a noise or cry she telephoned for Dr. Shields of Huntsville, who quickly responded, but when he arrived he pronounced the child dead and stated that death must have occurred instantaneously. A close examination of the little boy showed his neck to be broken. It is the opinion of the physician that the child struck directly on its head. The parents think the little boy awoke and started to climb from the cradle to its mother's bed and in doing so slipped and fell to the floor. The young parents are grief-stricken over the sad accident, as Eugene was their only boy, and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to them in their sorrow. The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Huntsville, where interment will take place.

The suit of Edward T. Woolley against the Ogden Woolen Mills company has been settled out of court without prejudice. The case of the state against Willard Cragin, charged with assault, that of striking Mrs. Trinka Van Korenau over the head with a shovel, was heard by Judge Armstrong and a jury in the district court yesterday. A great deal of testimony was introduced and the case submitted to the jury last

TREATISE ON DIPHTHERIA.

Dr. S. G. Egham, of Ogden has just completed a small pamphlet on diphtheria, from the standpoint of modern researches. The booklet contains a scientific description of the disease and the anti-toxin treatment with special instructions on sanitary management of contagious diseases. The incentive for the publication of the pamphlet, Dr. Egham says, was a victim of diphtheria who was treated by a method almost unknown here. The pamphlet is the specific curative agent of the disease, and is the diphtheria anti-toxin. The pamphlet is very instructive on the disease and useful in families.

ATTEMPTED HOLDUP.

As Aaron R. McIntyre of 305 Twenty-first street, was returning home at 9 o'clock last night, he was ordered to throw up his hands by a lone highwayman, whom he encountered near the corner of Grant and Twenty-sixth streets. McIntyre refused to do as he was bade and made a pass at the holdup, knocking aside the hand in which he held his revolver. This frightened his assailant and he started to run down the street, while McIntyre struck across the street, and with another man later took after the fleeing highwayman. When they reached the police station, however, they gave up the chase and permitted the robber to go.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

The mind reveals in the effort to comprehend the vastness of star distances, and now that instruments of the physicist have brought to notice measurements so minute as to be quite as inconceivable. The unaided eye cannot perceive much less than 1-16 millimeter (1-250 inch). The microscope reveals a smallness of 1-5000 millimeter; the measuring machine for engineering gauges, 1-5000; interference bands of light, 1-100,000; and the optical lever, 1-400,000 millimeter. The electric micrometer, Dr. P. E. Shaw, devised in 1900, but lately improved, goes even further. The apparatus consists of a series of six levers controlling on electric contact, with a micrometer screw to determine the movement, and in the smallest measurements yet made—showing the vibration of a telephone diaphragm by the faintest sound—a movement of 1-2,000,000 millimeter was detected.

The compass will not be the sole dependence of the future navigator, who will probably be able to check the errors of the capricious needle by means of a more reliable guide. The gyroscope, a heavy fly-wheel making 3,900 revolutions or more per minute, shows direction by rotating always in one plane, and it can be driven by an electric motor and mounted in gimbals. In a gyrocompass, the gyroscope's rotating plane could be detected after four hours of running, while it was unaffected by vibrations and a devious course.

The "gold-coated" teeth reported from Australia sheep have been investigated by Prof. A. L. Liversidge, who finds that the coating—which has a metallic luster like brass—is merely a tartaric acid deposit, made up principally of calcium phosphate and organic matter.

Whether the "radioles" of J. B. Burke represent chemically produced life is still the scientific puzzle of the hour. Scientific men are slow to admit that living organisms have been formed and Sir William Ramsay, the British chemist, offers a more credible explanation of the phenomena observed. In Burke's experiments a piece of a salt of radium was sprinkled on sterilized broth made solid by gelatine. Now radium gives off an emanation or gas, which decomposes water and coagulates albumen, and Prof. Ramsay points out that a granule of radium bromide in the soup mixture would probably harden a particle of the albumen into a tiny cell. From the water the radium emanation would fill the cell with oxygen and hydrogen, whose accumulation would almost certainly burst the cell in one or two places. This would exactly imitate the growth and budding of living yeast cells, and would continue as long as the radium emitted emanation.

The "mineral brilliantine" patented in France by M. Chevalot is prepared by melting 2 grams of picric acid per liter of pure water. Ramsay mixing this solution with twice its volume of alcohol and a mercuric silicate of soda, the whole being shaken in a metallic vessel. The product gives to wood—such as staves and floors—a brilliant polish not affected by water.

A QUARTET OF THE ROMANOFF BODYSERVANTS.

The four gorgeously attired Nubians shown in the cut are members of the royal household service of the czar at Peterhof. They are personal attendants, more especially for the czarina and the little imperial highnesses of the Romanoff family. These swarthy trusties occupy about the same position in the czar's household that is held by the East Indian servants in the English royal establishment. The czar's valet is a Cossack named Peter, but the little grand duchesses and the prince imperial are attended in public by these devoted and competent blacks.
