Waverley BICYCLES.

COVER THE EARTH

THEY ARE THE

Highest of all High Grades

And to prove this claim we ask you to compare the "Waverley" in detail, with any high grade from wheel on the market. Ask any "Waverley" rider about his wheel and then ride one yourself. That is the test.

Remember that it costs only $75.00 to buy a "WAVERLEY." An expensive wheel does not necessarily mean high quality, isn't it? There are and are not "no models."

Evanston, Wyoming, Herald: Mr. Clark Hemp Jr., aged 21 years of age, died at Lonsdale, on Bear River, about thirty miles from Ogden in this county last Sunday from the effects of a wound received on the Thursday previous, wherein was struck on the head with a sword by his intended father-in-law, Perry Winters, in a quarrel over an irrigation ditch. Circumstances indicate that the killing was not willful murder. Winters has left the place, and has not yet been apprehended.

Thursday a Chinese woman was poisoned at Merced, Cal., with strychnine through her husband's ignorance of English. She had been ill with malaria for some time, and was told to take quinine. The husband has been buying strychnine with which to kill squirrels on his ranch, and through error has lost the new girl from the palace. After taking the dose she was seized with violent convulsions and doctors were sent for, but the women could not be relieved and died after six hours' agony.

While out hunting last Friday morning Alphonz Brown came across the nearly decomposed corpse of a man in the Pacific piano grounds, near San Rafael, Cal., who, from all appearances, has been dead for at least a month and a half. He was dressed in a grey pair of pants, blue coat and grey vest, and wore tan shoes, white wool hose and light felt hat. Near the body was a bottle containing whisky, and a brown bag, which contained considerable written paper, a knife, a pipe, a bag of snuff and a morphine syringe, and some newspapers. There was $1.53 in the pocket.

Dillon, Montana, Tribune: John Olsen, Cal Edwards and Mike Cahill found the corpse of a man in a shallow prospect hole up on Grand gulch, on the Tuesday evening. The body had a cadaverous appearance and had been in there for some time; the flesh was all off the corpse, a part of the scalp still remained over the back part of the skull, covered with short black hair; the teeth were all in the jaws, showing by the last set of teeth that the man was not old; the soft nasal bones were decayed away. There is no clue as far, who it is or how he came to his death. There, undoubtedly, was foul play as a dead man could not bury himself.

Word has been received at Portland, Ore., that Isaac Swearingen was shot and killed last Friday night at his home, twenty-five miles southeast of Prineville, an isolated place in Crook county. The murder was committed by Harry Campbell as a result of a feud over Campbell's attentions to Swearingen's daughter. Campbell had been visiting the girl for some time, when a difference occurred between the two men and Campbell was ordered from the place with intimations never to return. Friday night he came again, and when questioned by the several men a fight was the result, in which the latter was killed.

RANGE FOR FOWLS.

It Must Be Large, Clean and Covered With Green Food.

Fowls must have a good, sized range; the smallest should not be less than one acre for each 100 birds. It depends on the kind to some extent. The larger and quieter breeds, as the Light Brahma or the Plymouth Rock, may be kept more easily in this way, as they do not desire the larger freedom insisted upon by the smaller and more active breeds. The range should be divided into at least two or three parts, so that each one may be used in turn, and the one last in use may be plowed and sowed with some green crop as oats, turnips, rape, mustard, peas or something the birds will eat readily.

When the crop has grown sufficiently for the birds to graze it, the flock is turned into it, and the other one is treated in the same way. This affords what is indispensable to fowls, a clean and healthful range on which the best green food may be gathered, together with such insects as may happen to accompany the crop. With this feed a sufficient supply of grain, waste meat, cooked bones and grated meat be provided regularly, together with pure water in abundance. The resulting house is attached to this yard, or both of them, being profitably placed between the two, so that the shutting one fowl and admitting another the birds may be changed from one to the other. With such a range as this one ounce of other food will be sufficient for a hen. The allowance of mash birds must be 1 to 11 lens, if the eggs are to be sold for hatching; otherwise it is a waste of food and if eggs to hatch the more among the best. It will be better to have a yard for selected hens kept especially for hatching, and to use the best and largest breeds for the other flocks.
