THE Twentieth Ward Sunday school will have an excursion to Lake Point, on Tuesday, June 22d. A new pavilion, 40x100 feet, has been erected to protect the children from the heat of the sun. The water is shallow, the bottom of the lake at the new pier being sandy, affording special facilities for bathing for children.

MR. JAMES CUSHING reports that the water mains in the 21st Ward supply the people there with something beside pure drinking water-leeches, small worms and insects being among the undesirable extras provided. About 5 o'clock last evening a little girl was drinking water from a hydrant and felt something go into her mouth. The drawn out the nawelcome in-stances their union was phenomenal. When drawn out the unwelcome intruder proved to be a " hair snake " nearly a foot in length. The residents of that district feel greater safety in making an examination of the aqueous fluid before they drink than otherwise.

Under these conditions laws that the Latter-day Saints looked upon as un-constitutional wave being enacted for the purpose of destroying a religious body. It was the bounden duty of the Saints to uphold the Constitution of the United States and all laws in Bound Over .-- On Saturday evening Brothers David John and E. e an unmistakable tes words of the speaker would bring against him the darts of those engaged in the merciless crusade, but they were his honest thoughts and feelings. He must pro-test against such unwarrantable pro-ceedings. For all the wealth of this world he would not have the load that timony of its divinity. This was the same Spirit promised to the disciples by the Savior, and its testimony placed their fest upon the sare foundation of personal knowledge that the doctrine is of God. The Savior had made a direct promise that whosever did the will of God should know of the truth of the doctrine. This was the promise given when the was the promise given when the Church was organized anciently, and it was to all who fulfilled the require-ments made of them. If there existed to-day the same Gospel, the same or-ganization, the same promise would be realized.

world he would not have the load that would rest on these who were guilty of causing the untold suffering among a God-fearing community. The hand of justice would finally reach them for matters refuse to be mismanaged for any great length of time. But after all, the bitter experience through which the Saints were passing might be for their greatest good. They should take home to themselves the lessons it plainly teaches. When in Liberty jail, a prisoner, the Prophet Joseph was admonished by the Lorit in regard to his trials and, sufferings, and others that were possible were There was one existing condition of There was one existing condition of things that caused a marked differ-ence between the Latter-day Saints and other communities; that was their unanimity. They had been baptized into one spirit, and being of one mind there was a harmonious correspond-ence in action. The Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ preached the Gospel to every mation where their presence was permitted, and almost every na-tion under heaven was represented in and others that were possible wen described. He was told that all these and more had the Son of Man endured He was informed they were for hi He was informed the Sonof Man endured. He was informed they were for his good, that he might gain experience. So should it be with this community. They are sufferers from injustice, therefore they should yiew it with unqualified repugnance, and thus avoid ever being cullive of it. They knew how it felt to be treated without mercy—this should cause all their acts to be tempered with that god-like quality. Their rights were being trampled into the dust; they should take a broad view of all things, and regard as sacred the smallest as well as largest right of every living thing. Besides, the situation is developing the righteous. It is also developing the hypocrites, for they also must have opportunities to act out their part, that their elimina-tion from the community may be brought about. The present may be dark, but the future is effulgent for the isuthful. The choir sang the anthem: The reason for it was that the Elders preached the same Gospel, and made the same promise as did Jesus; they did this by His authority, and it was by His Spirit that the people were united temporally and spiritually. The world said it was because certain men among them exercised despotic sway. This statement was incorrect, the true cause for the union being that the Saints had all received the testimony of the truth from the same source-from that Spirit that communicated the knowledge of the divinity of the
