FOOLED THE OLD MAN.

(Chicago Record-Herald.) Three years ago John Jermyn, a rich coal operator of Pennsylvania, threatened to disinherit his son, Walter M. Jermyn, if the latter married Miss Lena Kehoe, the daughter of an Os-wego, N. Y., butcher. Miss Kehoe, it seems, was beautiful and good, but the older Jermyn regarded it as impossible that the son of a divinely appointed mine operator could wed the daughter of a butcher. If Jermyn had been a coal digger, or if Kehoe had been the owner of a packing plant, all would have been well. As it was, a social gulf yawned between the two families, and young Walter was ordered to give up the girl or the $2.000,000 which his share of his father's estate would amount to. He went home and told papa that it broke his heart, but rather Will save money and delay by comthan bring disgrace upon the family he would take the money. Old man Jermyn blessed his boy and 237 praised him for showing the true Jer-myn brand of chivalry, after which the matter was dropped. Recently the elder Jermyn died, leaving $10,600,000. Young Walter got his share, $2,000,000, the other day and the arrended He has constructed more Roller Flour Mills than any other man in the Rocky the other day, and then announced that he and the butcher's daughter Mountain country. Also improved more Water Powers than any other vere married three years ago and have man in the West. His estimates are een on the waiting list ever since. Perhaps the young man has obtained money under false pretenses, but it would be a hard-hearted judge indeed, who would interrupt the proceedings now, and somehow the average citizen will be quite likely to jump at the con-clusion that the old man in the case was served good and right. It may be possible for the between sent Peapert always correct and satisfactory.
