ISSUING ELECTION CERTIFICATES.

There is considerable complaint over the delay in issuing certificates of election to those persons who, in Salt Lake county, received a majority of votes for various legislative and county officers. This county seems to be the only one where there is any statutory tendency or where there attaches any suspicion of warning some schemer; and there should be no occasion of complaint here. The law controlling the matter is very clear, no question having been raised as to its validity, whatever may be thought of another statute bearing on another branch of election work. The canvass of the returns has been made, the result has been officially declared by the county canvassing board's determination that certain persons have been elected, and the certificates of election are now overdue. Any unnecessary delay in their issue is an unlawful act upon the part of a ministerial officer, punishable by a fine of not more than a thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the State prison for not more than five years, or both fine and imprisonment. The matter of fixing bonds has nothing to do with the issue of certificates to the officers-elect; the certificates must first issue, and the giving of bonds is a condition precedent to assuming the duties of office; the fixing of bonds belongs wholly to another department of official procedure.

Under the law, the county commissioners, as a canvassing board, "must declare elected the persons having the highest number of votes given for each office to be filled by the voter of a single county or subdivision thereof." In Salt Lake county this has been done; the officers thus affected being members of the Legislature, county officials, etc. The law then directs that "the county clerk must immediately make out and deliver to such persons a certificate of election signed by him and authenticated with his seal." This issue of certificates follows next upon the declaration of the result; there is no intervening action, no question of bonds, no waiting for a supposed prospective contest to materialize, and no chicanery or wrongful putting off; nothing but a reasonable time in which to make out and authenticate the certificates of election. In this county those certificates should have been issued in one day, or at the most two days, after the canvassing board declared the result, the time being ample. Now that consistently more than that period has elapsed, good cause exists for complaining of unnecessary, hence unlawful, delay.

The inconsistency of holding back such certificates will be easily recognized when it is remembered that if the official on whom devolves the duty of issue had been favorable to the office-seeker, and there had been a possibility of contest, his whole office force likely would have been tumbling over itself in the eagerness to get the certificates ready. Such promptness in discharging an official duty is not to be complained of, but as just officer will go to the other extreme when political opponents are concerned. But since delay is computed of if no institution to hold back is discernible, it is in order for the county commissioners to take cognizance thereof, and to see that their order in pursuance of subdivision 3, section 21, of the law of April 14, the county government law, is carried out in regard to the issue of election certificates. If, on the other hand, there has been no unreasonable neglect in this matter, the speedy coming forth of these certificates will be acceptable evidence that the many complaints of delay have been made in undue haste.

OUR FORESTS.

The onward march of civilization in this country was from the first marked by an outlawful on the gigantic forests that adorned the soil. The trees were destroyed without plan or regard to future consequences in such a manner as is criminal in variation. There is now, fortunately, a change in public in this regard, and the question of preserving the forests is being recognized as one of vital importance to coming generations, if not to the present one. It is now understood that the forests are great regulators of the rainfall and that they largely prevent the sudden fall in temperature that is so trying and destructive to higher animal life.

Why forests are instruments in regulating the rainfall is easy to understand. The rain that falls on a naked hill rapidly runs off and the effects of the shower are therefore soon over. It is different where the hill is clothed in verdant foliage. This will store the moisture and gradually return it to the air, where it again will condense and fall down as life-giving rain. On hills deprived of their natural clothing the rain will soon cascade in streams, over uniting and swelling until with irresistible force they rush down upon the agricultural districts below, carrying destruction with them. Every summer, the last few years, settlements in our State have had experiences demonstrating this fact.

The value of forests as purifiers of the air is hardly less important. In common with all living plants, the trees absorb the deadly gases of the atmosphere and supply oxygen, without which animal life would be impossible. Everybody has heard about Death Valley with its heat in the day-time and freezing cold at night. It is a valley of death because deprived of the plant vegetation on which animal life is so largely dependent for remunerable existence.

It has been pointed out that the United States now has comparatively few forests than France, Germany or Austria, and hundreds of square miles are annually denuded of trees by fire and otherwise. It is high time for every state to take measures for the preservation and the economic use of what is left. Forest associations exist for this purpose, and their efforts deserve the full support of the people.

LOGAN CANYON SNOWSLIDE.

Fortunately such lamentable accidents as that of Wednesday night in Logan canyon, recorded in Thursday's NEWS, are comparatively few in this State; yet they have been of sufficient frequency to portray the great danger which attends laboring in canyons at this season of the year. The necessity of earning a living caused the three victims of this calamity to be in the canyon at such a critical time; and while if they had thought their journey was fraught with such great peril they probably would have deferred it for a time, there appears to be no reason to believe that there was any negligence which contributed to such a sad result. As it is, a father and son have given up their lives and a young man has been so seriously hurt that the full effect of his injuries cannot be determined now; a widow and children have been left in comparatively destitute circumstances, bereft of their chief support, and plunged into indescribable sorrow at the sudden taking away of two of the family. Both the deceased and the bereaved bear an excellent reputation, and sympathy for those who are called to mourn is deep and widespread in the community where they reside. We are pleased to note that this sympathy is being given practical expression by the good people of Logan, who are raising means to relieve the distress and lighten, by the manifestation of truly Christian love, the burden now resting upon Mr. Christensen's family. A subscription list is being circulated, with a view to obtaining sufficient funds to pay funeral expenses and to raise the mortgage on the little home now occupied by the widow—a worthy purpose which the kind and generous residents of the Temple city should not fail to achieve. And may it not be a duty of the coming winter to record another similar calamity in the State.

MANY THOUSANDS OF POOR.

The work of relieving the poor and needy in this locality occupies the attention of a considerable number of people who are often put to their wits' end to answer all the demands of necessity upon them. Yet there is one satisfaction, namely, that the numbers of the poor are not so great but that the efforts to relieve them are answered with success; and by hard work on the part of those who look after the deserving indigent, and by the liberality of the people, the actual suffering is reduced to a very small limit, though it were better if it could be removed altogether. Among the Latter-day Saints on a religious organization, the system of obtaining and disbursing means is so perfect that whenever it is fairly applied there is no occasion for any to remain in a state of want; and there is generally something to spare for those not numbered with the Saints, but who are worthy objects of charity.

In some of the big cities of the country, however, the condition is far from being as satisfactory as it is here. In the city of Chicago, for instance, it is estimated that more than 100,000 mouths will have to be supplied with food this winter to prevent actual starvation. The situation already has reached a painful emergency, as noted in Tuesday evening's Chicago Dispatch, which says:

> Developments at the county agent's office are positively alarming, and the worst predictions of the people may be well underscored at once. "If we intend to feed those needy Chicago's starving thousands this winter we must do it now," the officers of the county agent, with western economy. The records of applications for assistance numbered nearly over 300 families in three days, and today that record is being far exceeded. Yesterday fourteen persons were sent to the Dunning poor farm, and on Saturday the same number went there. In the records thus logged and classified for food yesterday were big, able-bodied men who would see their work and who trembled in the cold and shed tears from fear that they would not be able to procure food to keep starvation from their families. Many women also shed tears from hunger and other hardships. County Agent Olson struggled hard with the difficult task before him. The men told harrowing stories of sick wives, helpless little children, and the weary hours and days they had put in looking for employment.

On the same subject the Chicago Record declares that it is said that never in the history of the county agent's office, excepting the year following the big fire, has such a demand been made on it for relief, times were hard following the close of the World's Fair, and the figures for that year show that 26,500 families were looked after by the county, a year ago the figures jumped to 42,783 families, and in the case of business (during 32,853 families had been provided with food and provisions, and the hardest months of the year be yet to tell its story.

This is a pitiful tale, which probably can be duplicated in some other large cities. It tells of the great need of a revival in business in this country, so that those of the vast number who really desire remunerative employment can get it. If the revival does not come soon, there is further trouble ahead for the nation.

ANOTHER RHEUMATIC CURE.

Cures for rheumatism seem to be multiplying rapidly just now; and if they are effective it is well, for rheumatic affections have been an inscrutable heretofore as they are painful, notwithstanding the very many remedies that have been offered and which may afford temporary relief in many cases. The latest method is said to be the discovery of a retired London merchant, Louis A. Tallerman by name, and is known as the Tallerman-Shilfold hot air treatment. For the past three weeks the method has been undergoing a practical test in a New York hospital, under the direction of Dr. Gibney, who reports that the results obtained there in the short time during which the treatment has been tried have been such as to cause the prediction that it will make a revolution in the treatment of rheumatic diseases. The Bartholomew and London hospitals, England, have been using the remedy for some time, it is said, with the greatest success.

The apparatus used by Mr. Tallerman consists of a copper cylinder, in which the affected part is placed. The cylinder rests on a furnace by which the air in it is heated to a temperature of 250 to 300 degrees, and an arrangement of valves and tops keeps the air perfectly dry and carries off all traces of moisture from perspiration. By this means all danger of burning or scalding the patient by the intense heat is avoided, and no inconvenience is felt. In fact, the sensation is rather pleasant, and patients often fall asleep while undergoing the treatment, which lasts from forty to fifty minutes. Two or three applications, it is asserted, will cure the most obstinate cases. The effect of the treatment is to relax the stiffened joints, render them supple, and restore them to their normal conditions, by setting up a profuse perspiration and increasing the circulation without any heart excitement.

It will not do to rely too much on the claims of any new method; but if this stands the tests which reputable physicians are now seeking to have made, it will be one of the greatest cures in the affliction that has been recorded this century. Such a progressive step may not be regarded as unlikely, since medical science has been keeping pace with the general wonderful advancement of the past few decades.

What a prominent statesman has said.

H. M. Bissell, senator member of H. M. Bissell & Co., 217 N. 2d St., St. Louis, writes: I had been left with a very distressing cough, the result of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve, until I took Ballard's Horehound Syrup. One bottle completely cured me. I sent one bottle to my sister, who had a severe cough, and she experienced immediate relief. I always recommend this syrup to my friends.

John Cranston, 908 Hampshire street, Quincy, Ills., writes: I have found Ballard's Horehound Syrup superior to any other cough medicine I have ever known. It never disappoints. Price 25c.

Ballard's Snow Liniment.

The Liniment is different in compositions from any other Liniment on the market. It is a scientific discovery which results in it being the most penetrating Liniment ever known. There are numerous white imitations, which may be recommended because they pay the seller a greater profit. Beware of these and demand Ballard Snow Liniment. It positively cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Wounds, Cuts, Sciatic and Inflammatory Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Sore Feet, Contracted Muscles, Stiff Joints, Old Sores, Pain in Back, Barb Wire Cuts, Sore Chest or Throat, and is especially beneficial in Paralysis.
