BREVITIES.

A new tipple made from the sweet potato, is called "Aromatic."

The New York newboys earn $3 a day and smoke expensive cigars.

New York boarding-house keepers now add to their advertisements: "No moving May 1."

A Quebec paper says there are three tons of 20 cent pieces in one of the bank vaults of that city.

A Sunday school teacher at Warren, Mass., promises the boy who acts the best during the year, and commits the most Testament a meerschaum pipe.

The Hessian Government has forbidden exhibition of children of school age by traveling showmen. It has also forbidden the employment of children as rope-dancers, horse-riders and gymnasts.

A Chinese thus describes a trial in the English law courts: "One man is quite silent, another talks all the time, and twelve wise men condemn the man who has not said a word."

A Chicago gambler has invented a new trick for cheating in gambling. It consists of a small mirror, set in a finger-ring, which, put on the little finger of the right hand, enables the dealer to see every card he deals to his opponent. The man has been arrested, but a large quantity of the jewelry is worn by gamblers, who have taken stock in the patent.

A convict in the Michigan State Prison has invented a turning-lathe which turns sticks of variable thickness and of any degree of crookedness. It is principally used in turning scythe-snaths, but it will do any other kind of twisted work equally well. Besides doing the work of a dozen men, it does its work with greater accuracy than could possibly be done by hand.

A Dublin barrister, in laying before the Irish court of Chancery a letter threatening him with death if he did not throw up his brief in an ejectment case, remarked that such a communication might be regarded as of no consequence, "except that the plaintiff in this action was badly wounded, and his coachman was shot dead, pending this suit after the last trial."

An enterprising London firm publishes every day at noon a little paper of twelve pages about the size of "All the Year Round," called "The News List and Index." In it is given a list of the subjects discussed by the morning papers—the correspondence, reviews and intelligence. The weekly papers and the magazines are dealt with in the same way. The price of this curious little sheet is a penny.

Mr. Muntz, Member of Parliament for Birmingham, England, proposed, recently, that English workmen should relieve themselves of a debt of £25,000,000 a year. "How," asked one of his hearers. "Why, by not spending it," said the practical M. P. "Your liquor costs you £70,000,000. I don't ask you to be teetotalers—I take my glass of beer—but only take as much, and you will save £25,000,000 a year."

We have the testimony of two competent witnesses—Dr. Jones, of Tennessee Lunatic Asylum, and Miss Dix, who has devoted her life to the amelioration of the condition of the demented—that a wonderfully large percentage of cases of insanity are produced. In the South women indulge in a system of stimulation called "dipping," which comprises the application of fine Scotch snuff in large quantities to their teeth and mouth with brushes, made for the purpose. Miss Dix insists that many women, on account of their nervous sensibility, have laid the foundation of insanity by this disgusting practice.

Mrs. Dahlgren, wife of Admiral Dahlgren, has started a movement for active opposition to the Woman Suffrage party. Mrs. Sherman, wife of Gen. Sherman, and a number of ladies, support the anti-woman suffrage idea. They think that the universal voice of the women of this country should be heard upon the subject, and they feel assured that the result would be, that an immense majority of their sex would be found to be opposed to accepting the right to vote, believing that such right would bring its burdens, duties and responsibilities, which would not only be distasteful to the female sex, but of a character which they are not willing to assume.

Somebody, who had sat forty years or so under Father Ballou, the well-known Universalist Divine, of Boston, went to him one day in great perplexity of mind, and said:

"Do I understand you to say, Father Ballou, that all men will be saved—Orthodox as well as Universalists?"

"Why, yes," said the good old Doctor; "that is our belief, and that is what I preach."

"Well, I never understood it exactly so before," said the hearer; and he went away grieving that there was no hell for the Orthodox.

There seems to be some doubt in France as to the origin of the guillotine, but French people give themselves all the credit of being the first to chop off heads by machinery. They entirely ignore the claims of Scotland; yet there is an instrument of execution in the museum of the Royal Scotch Society of Antiquaries, called "the maiden," that performed the same service in Scotland which the guillotine now performs in France. Besides other heads, it cut off the head of the Regent Morton, who is supposed to have introduced it into that country. It is a disagreeable looking machine, quite black, with a pulley, by which a heavy stone with a sharp blade fixed in it was raised up to descend on the criminal's neck.

Correspondence.

MAIDEN TOWN, Dec. 4, 1869.

President Geo. A. Smith.—Dear Brother, I take up my pen to inform you of my safe arrival in Australia, and to give you a concise account of what I have done and how I have done it. As soon as circumstances would permit, (some months after my appointment) I left our much loved mountain home by the Central Pacific Railroad. On my arrival in San Francisco I went to work to hunt up the Saints. I found them in a very scattered and lifeless condition. Some had apostatized, others were on the verge of apostasy. A few were still called Latter-day Saints, but had lost the spirit or nearly so; they had not even the name to live. There had been no meetings for years, and so unacquainted were they with each other, that it occupied me some weeks to find them. I succeeded in bringing a few together and held meetings at the house of Sister Eveleth, and I believe I may say we were blessed and received a goodly portion of the Spirit of God. Some promised that they would use all their energies to gather to Zion at once, and all promised that they would lose no opportunities to that end.

Having been sent on my mission with a purse of scrip, according to the Apostolic order, I had to remain in California until I could get means to pay my passage by sea. After I had got the Saints together, I had no difficulty, for all contributed liberally according to their means, and their kindness I shall not easily forget. Having procured a passage I left the Saints in charge of Elder Joseph Spencer, an Australian Saint, and instructed him to communicate with the authorities in Zion. I then embarked on board the North German bark Sarah & Maria, bound for Nelson, New Zealand. There were thirteen passengers. We had a very pleasant passage, of sixty-three days. I preached every Sunday, and was listened to with attention, and had the pleasure of baptizing one of the passengers, a schoolmaster named Douglas, a very intelligent man, and one who I trust will be useful in helping to build up the kingdom of our God. Having to wait in Nelson over Sunday for steamer, I preached twice on the wharf to a very attentive and numerous congregation. After preaching I was asked several questions, the whole of which, as it appeared, I answered satisfactorily, and created a good impression, for they exacted of me a promise that I would visit them again as soon as possible or send some one having authority.

I am now in Victoria, Australia; I have been here ten days. I spent two with my family, and have traveled over three hundred miles, have preached in several places, baptized two and hunted up the scattered Saints. I have organized them into two branches of eighteen members. There are others to be hunted for. This is my present business in Maiden Town, about one hundred and forty miles from Melbourne. When I have found and organized as many of the Saints as I can in Victoria and have given them such instruction as the spirit may direct, I intend visiting Sydney, Newcastle and other places in New South Wales, New Zealand, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, etc., and then call a Conference for the 6th of April, the result of which I will advise you. I shall write to you once a month if nothing prevent, and give you all the news I can concerning this remote part of the Lord's vineyard.

Dear President, I understood when I left home that Elders Peterson, Knowlton and Bone were set apart for this Mission. Will you be kind enough, at your earliest convenience, to give me some information about them? This is really a very large and scattered field of labor, and a few more elders would be a great boon.

Your faithful and obedient servant and brother,

ROBERT BEAUCHAMP.

MID-WINTER SCENES ON THE UPPER YELLOWSTONE.

"Buckskin," writing to the Montana Pick and Plover, describes some of the wonders of mid-winter on the Upper Yellowstone, as follows:

"Having just returned from a hunting excursion on the Upper Yellowstone, I cannot but give you a description of the wonders of that region as viewed in mid-winter. During the excessively cold weather in January, when the mercury froze in some parts of the Territory, myself and companion were cabin on the west side of Yellowstone lake—managing, with a boiling spring on either side of our hut, a dozen fine venison saddles hanging against its walls, and plenty of dry drift-wood near, to maintain comfort and cheerfulness. To the east of us, and about six miles distant, was Hot Spring Island—which is in the centre of the lake, and contains hundreds of boiling fountains. Of a clear, calm and temperate day the steam columns from these island-springs tower up so they can be seen many miles off, reminding one of a port with a thousand steamers preparing to embark. But during the 'cold-snap' referred to, the columns were all merged in one dense mass, which, viewed from our cabin, seemed suspended over the lake like a huge table-mountain of vapor. The third day after the setting in of the intense cold—danger of 'frost-bites' having been so imminent meantime that we could not venture 300 yards from the cabin—the weather moderated with an agitated, not to say windy, atmosphere; and we were enticed out on the morning of the fourth by bright beams glancing through apertures and cracks here and there in our hastily constructed house. Mr. Editor, I am inexperienced with the pen, but had I the power of a Mæculay or Irving I could not do justice to the surrounding splendors. Steam from the thousands of geysers, blown in all directions, had settled upon and thickly crusted every object, as far as the eye could reach. Our little mud-hut had been transformed into a fairy palace, and was enveloped with sparkling diamonds; the mountains were all clad in diamond mail; every plant, stone and tree was composed of prismatic diamonds, around which, in bewildering brilliancy, played all the colors of the rainbow. Through these wondrous scenes we wended our way up to the Central Falls—300 feet in perpendicularity—and there were views out-rivaling all we had seen before. I do not think I exaggerate the slightest when I say there were icicles on the west side of the falls an eighth of a mile long. The water dripping from shelf to shelf adown the precipice's rugged front, formed powerful braces every few yards to support these immense masses—and thus it was they stretched from the highest point to the ground, forming a mighty crystal arcade, which, seen in the full blaze of the noon-day sun, presented the most splendid and sublime spectacle the mind of man is capable of conceiving."
