QUEEN VICTORIA.

The Rev. Dr. Norman McLeod was one of a party who yesterday assisted in breaking ground in connection with a new lunatic asylum for the barony parish at Lenzie Junction, near Glasgow. At an entertainment which followed, the chairman in giving the toast of the Queen, referred to the health of Her Majesty, and asked Dr. McLeod, as having recently returned from Balmoral, whether he felt at liberty to say anything on the subject. Dr. McLeod then said: "What is meant by Her Majesty being 'morally and mentally incapacitated for work,' I leave Mr. Disraeli to explain, for I do not comprehend it. I beg to say that I have had the honor, in the providence of God, to minister to Her Majesty in public and private for the last thirteen or fourteen years, and I have seen her in every variety of circumstances-in the highest prosperity and happiness which any married woman, not to speak of the Queen, could enjoy, and in the very depth of her distress, and I declare most solemnly, although speaking with her in the greatest privacy and in the most intimate communion that a subject and a clergyman can have, I have never heard her utter one word or one sentiment that did not do the highest honor to Her Majesty, whether as a Queen or a woman. I have not only never seen the remotest trace of any moral or mental weakness, but I have seen in every instance remarkable evidence of moral and mental strength and capacity. Her Majesty has just passed through a severe attack of rheumatic gout, which so affected her hands that for a time she was utterly unable to sign her name, and from a severe neuralgia from which she has entirely recovered, and I have neverseen her in better spirits or in better health or stronger than she is at the present moment. At the same time I am far from saying that she has recovered her strength so as tobe able to do more than she is doing: for I make bold to say that none of us have the slightest comprenension of the unceasing demand that is made upon a person in her high position of attending to innumerable details and carrying burdens upon her mind without the possibility of one moment's rest. Our own wives find how trying upon their nervous energy is this constant care of a large family, but when we think what the Queen has to do as a mother, with her children occupying such an important position in society, what she has to do in being compelled to think about the affairs of a nation to whose interests she is profoundly devoted, when we think of the constant weight that must ever be upon her mind, we feel the wonder is that she is able to perform her duties in the way that she has done. No one who knows the Queen but knows she would do all that is possble for her to do, and no one who knows her but is amazed at her extraordinary considerateness to every one; how she occupies her thought upon every subject, and how she attends to such minute details of duty. I will take it upon me to say that the case of the poorest subject in her kingdon, if made known to her, would receive her immediate attention. Let me also say, the manner in which the Queen is often criticised, is a cruel and cowardly injustice, when neither as a woman nor as a Queen she can make any reply, but must endure the injustice. While such attacks may be made by a few, I feel certain that a large majority of this nation so revere the monarch who occupies the throne, and so esteem her unblemished personal character, and the manner in which, during her reign, she has discharged her public and private duties, that, could they alter it, they, with one voice, would unite with us when we say, "God save the Queen," and may she long be preserved to the nation.-London Times, Nov. 18th.
