But knowing how in-rendulous people are in regard to such things, I have omitted to write until now. However, on reading of the death of C. P. Jones, of Malad, at the house of his brother-in-law in Salt Lake City, I feit that it would be wrong to withhold any longer, for per-haps someone may have faith enough to try it and thereby save the life of some poor creature, as there is no family so poor that they do not have the remedy in the house. If I should say to take half an ounce of chloride of sodium and as much aqua pura as would dissolve it and send them to the drug store to get it, many would have more faith in the remedy. But the remedy is simply to dissolve a heaping tablespoonful of salt in water and ad-minister it to the patient, not neces-sarily all at once, but so soon as you reasonably can. If at the end of an hour every muscle is not quiet repeat the dose, but that will seldom be neces-sary.
