KISSED ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE.

"You scoundrel," yelled young Jacob Green at his good neighbor Brown,—"You kissed my wife upon the street—I ought to knock you down."

"That's where you're wrong," good Brown replied, "In accents soft and sweet,—I kissed her, that I've not denied, But I kissed her on the cheek—" and I did so because she looked so handsome—the very picture of beauty and health. What is the secret of it?"

"Well," replied Green, "since you ask it, I will tell you; she uses Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I accept your apology. Good night."

An unhealthy woman is rarely, if ever, beautiful. The peculiar diseases to which so many of the sex are subject, are prolific causes of pale, sallow faces, dull, lusterless eyes and emaciated forms. Women so afflicted, can be permanently cured by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; and with the restoration of health comes that beauty which, combined with good qualities of head and heart, makes women angels of loveliness.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. It is a positive specific for leucorrhea, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb.

BUILDING CASTLES.

Building castles! April gleams
Flickering round the fairy dreams,
That fling a halo rare and rich
Where, in fancy's fairest niche,
Eager hands of happy youth
Raise a shrine to Love and Truth:
Not a cloudlet in the sky,
Not a cold breeze rushing by!
No touch of fear, no stain of guilt
In the castles that we built.

Building castles! August's sun
Lit us ere our work was done;
Glad and glorious in the strength
That the noonday wins at length,
When the fitful morning light
Steadies in its perfect height;
When the joyous hope is crowned;
When the trust we seek has found;
The full cup we drop had spilt
In the castles that we built.

Building castles! Wind and snow
Sweep the plains of long ago;
Over many a leaded grate
Rise the fragments which we save
From the ruins of the past,
To raise the shrine that is our last;
To guard kind memory's tender tone
For the few that love us here.
"Not as we will, but as Thou wilt,"
For the last castle life has built.

DEATH.

The signs of impending death are many and variable. No two instances are precisely identical, yet several signs are common in many cases. Shakespeare, who observed everything else, observed and recorded some of the premonitory signs of death also. In the account of the death of Falstaff, the sharpness of the nose, the coldness of the feet, gradually extending upward, the picking at the bed-clothes, and the playing with flowers are accurately described.

For some time before death indications of its approach become apparent. Speech grows thick and labored, the hands, if raised, fall instantly, the respiration is difficult, the heart loses its power to propel the blood to the extremities, which consequently become cold, a clammy moisture oozes through the pores of the skin, the voice grows weak and husky or piping, the eyes begin to lose their lustre.

In death at old age there is a gradual dulling of all the bodily senses and of many of the mental faculties; memory fails, judgment wavers, imagination goes out like a candle. The muscles and tendons get stiff; the voice breaks; the cords of the [illegible] are [illegible]. Small noises irritate, sight becomes dim, nutrition goes on feebly, digestion is impaired, the secretions are insufficient, or vitiated, or cease; capillary circulation is clogged. Finally the central organ of the circulation comes to a stop, a full stop, and this stoppage means dissolution. This is the death of old age which few attain to.

Many people have an idea that death is necessarily painful, even agonizing, but there is no reason whatever to suppose that death is a more painful process than birth. It is because in a certain proportion of cases dissolution is accompanied by visible spasm and distortion of the countenance that this idea exists, but it is as nearly certain as anything can be that these distortions of the facial muscles are not only painless but take place unconsciously. In many instances, too, a comatose or semi-comatose stage supervenes, and it is altogether probable that more or less complete unconsciousness prevails. We have, too, abundant evidence of people who have been nearly drowned and resuscitated, and they all agree in the statement that after a few moments of painful struggling, fear and anxiety pass away and a state of tranquility succeeds. They see visions of green fields, and in some cases hear pleasing music; and so far from being miserable their sensations are delightful. But when attempts at resuscitation are successful the resuscitated persons almost invariably protest against being brought back to life, and declare that resuscitation is accompanied by physical pain and acute mental misery.

Death is a fact which every man must personally experience, and consequently of universal interest; and as facts are facts, the wisest course is to look them squarely in the face, for necessity is coal black, and Death keeps no calendar.—F. Bradford in Buffalo Medical Journal, June.

How Electricity Is Measured.

The measurement of electricity has long since been brought to a high degree of precision, but the conditions under which the currents used in electric lighting must be measured are entirely different from those employed in the laboratory. The requirements are a cheap, automatic and reliable apparatus, capable of acting without supervision for a considerable time. One of the simplest forms of the electric meter depends upon the chemical action of the current. When the electric current is caused to flow through a vessel containing the solution of any salt, the only way in which it can find passage is by decomposing the compound into its constituent parts. The molecules of those compounds which in chemistry are called salts, are complex. They are formed by the union of two distinct groups of atoms. One of these groups is called the acid radical; the other consists of one or more of the atoms of some metal. The affinity which the acid radical and the metallic atoms possess for each other is considerable, and in order to separate them a definite amount of energy must be expected. When the salt is dissolved in water, and the solution forms the path of an electric current, a portion of the salt is broken up into the two groups just mentioned. The metal set free from its acid radical partner appears in its own natural metallic form at the point where the current leaves the solution. The acid radical appears simultaneously at the other terminal where the current enters the solution, where it either attacks the substance of which the terminal is formed, or, failing in that, decomposes some molecule of water. In this process electric energy is expended, and the amount of metal set free at the negative pole of the electro-lytic cell affords a perfect definite measure of the quantity of the current which has been transmitted.

The choice of metals is limited to two or three well-known types, for although almost any metallic salt may be decomposed by the current, those only are suitable for the purpose of which the deposited metal will remain in the solution without being corroded or redissolved. The metal must, moreover, form an adherent coating upon the surface of the electrode, so that the latter can be removed from the cell, and washed and dried, without loss of weight; and almost the only voltameters in which these conditions are fulfilled, even approximately, are those in which silver is deposited from a solution of nitrate of silver, copper from the sulphate of copper, or zinc from the sulphate of zinc.—Prof. Ed. L. Nichols, Chautauquan, June.

Eating Horseflesh.

"One of the features of Parisian life that interested me a good deal when I was at their World's Exposition last year," said a New Yorker the other day, "was the consumption of horseflesh by the poor. I noticed it first among the street gamins, who ate it with evident gusto in the shape of sandwiches purchased from street vendors. The animals killed, I believe, are free from acute disease, and are simply horses that are worn out in the service of cabmen, street car companies, etc., and are bought cheap and fattened up a bit before slaughter. I tasted some of the most myself at a cheap restaurant, and probably I should have liked it had I not known what it was. My prejudice, however, was so great that I could not finish it, but called in an urchin from the street and watched him fill his hungry little interior with it in a twinkling.—N. Y. Tribune.

Surgical Progress.

An important advance in surgery—the successful substitution of catgut, ivory and bone for defects in bones, muscles and nerve sinews—was illustrated by Professor Gluck at the surgical congress at Berlin. The inserted material sucks up the juices of the body, establishing the junction of the separated ends without any shortening of the part. Professor Gluck presented cases in which motility had been restored to defective fingers—a hitherto impossible feat—by insertions of from two to four inches of catgut; a case in which the removal of a tumor from the thigh had left a defective bone which was remedied by the insertion of ivory, shortening being prevented and a case in which a large piece of nerve in the groin had been replaced with catgut, with no serious impairment of functions.—Ex.

Orange Blossoms and Brides.

Saracen brides were the first to wear orange blossoms and occasionally the same emblem has been worn by European brides ever since the time of the Crusades, but the general adoption of wreaths of orange blossoms for brides is comparatively a modern practice, due especially to the recent taste for flower language. The subject of bridal decorations being made a study, and the orange flower being found suitable, from the use made of it by the ancient Saracens, it was introduced by milliners as a fit ornament for brides. The fashion once planted soon became a custom, now very generally adopted by all brides who study the conventions of society and follow the accepted fashions.—Ex.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life.

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, rosy, plump, weighing about 140 pounds. For further particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, Druggist, Fort Smith. Trial Bottles of this wonderful Discovery Free at A. C. Smith & Co.'s Drug Store.

Epilepsy.

This is what you ought to have in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at A. C. Smith & Co.'s Drug Store.

Professor Mehan's Experience.

My little girl, aged seven years, was afflicted with a severe cough and cold. She could not sleep but coughed almost incessantly. I was induced by a friend to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was astonished at the immediate relief it gave and the cure it produced. I have tried many remedies for coughs and colds, but this is superior to any of them.—Prof. J. M. Mehan, Capital City Commercial College, Des Moines, Iowa. For sale by Z. C. M. I. Drug Department.

What Does It Mean?

"100 Doses One Dollar" means simply that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it gives more for the money than any other preparation. Each bottle contains 100 doses and will average to last a month, while other preparations taken according to directions, are gone in a week. Therefore, be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla the best blood purifier.

Deformity From Bright's Disease.

S. D. VanBuskirk, of Demarest, N. J., says Aug. 29, 1888: "Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., has cured our daughter of Bright's Disease, after all other means had failed. She was so swollen that she measured 45 inches around the waist, and 15 inches below the knee. To say that we feel thankful for such a boon as Favorite Remedy is but a poor expression of the feelings of grateful parents."
