settlement into the dead of winter, as the law requires it must be done within six months. It is absolutely impossible for people to get in there in the months of Janu-ary, February, or March. The bill proposes that the time shall be extended until May 15 of the present year for the homesteaders to establish their residence on the land filed on. The people had no chance to say when they could file upon the land, for that was done by the regulation of the general land offic and it was at a time when, as I said and it was at a time when, as I said, it was absolutely impossible to estab-lish their residence within six months on the lands filed on. Therefore I ask that the bill be passed now, because Feb. 28 is in the dead of winter, and if the time is not extended the settlers will have to go there and attempt to make their homes at that time, which would be imposisble. The bill proposes to extend the time unth May The Vice President-The question is

FARMING IN RUSSIAN TRANSCAUCASIA.

Failing in my efforts to start farming in Transcaucasia this year, on account of insecurity of life and property in the Caspian section of this country, mainly due to the warlike movement of the Ma-homedan Tartars against the Armenians. I had to give up my plans and to lock for better times, a quieter place and more pleasant surroundings. At the end of the summer a friend of inlne wrote me from Tiflis, offering to rent me his house and barn in the suburbs of Tiflis if I had any inclination for starting a dairy, as milk is worth in town quite two cents a pound wholesale and three cents retail with a big demand. So, as I had nothing hetter in sight. I jumped to the oppor-tunity, and telling bood-bye to my Arme-nian friends in Shusha, after witnessing the burning down by the Tartars of the last named city. I escaped safe and unhurt to Tiflis, losing only a couple of horses, a good American corn planter, and my whole agricultural library, robbed by the natives, a heavy and unfortunate loss for me. Now, anyhow, if I could not do my-ning i saw a good many things done that might interest the readers of the R. N.. "."
