THE RACE QUESTION.

Senator Walthall On the Subject of Federal Interference In Elections.

SOMETHING ABOUT FRAUD AND BRIBERY.

Another Murder Through a Love Affair in Texas.—A Saloon Robbed.

GEN. CROOK AND THE APACHE INDIANS.

By Telegraph to the News.

SENATE.

The Silver Coinage Bill.—Interference in Elections.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—In the Senate today Hoar presented resolutions adopted at a recent Boston mass meeting on the subject of election difficulties in the South. Referred.

Cockrell introduced a bill to repeal the silver coinage bill of February 28, 1878, and to require the purchase and coinage of $5,000,000 a month in standard silver dollars. Cockrell requested the finance committee, to which the bill was referred, to take immediate action upon it, and report it back to the Senate for its action.

Chandler's resolution, calling on the Attorney-General for a report concerning the maltreatment of Henry Fauness at Aberdeen, Miss., was taken up, and Walthall addressed the Senate. He said it could not be possibly pretended that Congress had any jurisdiction of the subject. Referring to the hanging in effigy of Secretary Proctor at Aberdeen and the assault on Fauness, he said it was simply the wanton conduct of a few persons and was disapproved by the community. Speaking for himself, and representing the sentiment of the people of Mississippi, he condemned those outrages and felt that the people of the United States would not hold an entire community responsible for the action of a few persons.

Proceeding to the question of

in elections, Walthall agreed with Ingalls that the race question was the most formidable and portentous ever presented to a free people for solution. He saw no remedy which Congress could apply which promised any practical result. He believed that arbitrary enactments would but increase the difficulty. The professed purpose of Federal control was to secure a fair count for the negro vote, but the actual object was to count that vote for the republican party. The proposition was such a menace to the rights of the people that it must meet with the condemnation of all men who would preserve the spirit of this government. In his opinion the Federal control of congressional election in any Southern State would be combined by any Federal law that Congress could pass, while the people would be driven into sheer cooperation than before, because the election of negro judges and officers meant negro domination, and meant death to every interest and hope of the people. He could not counsel his people to accept such a desolating barbarism without a struggle, nor to flee from the homes of themselves and their ancestors. He would not urge them to violate any public law or private right, but he would urge them, not as a remedy but as a means of present safety, to unity. He would appeal to them for their own safety to subordinate all party differences to that end and purpose. There was no safety for them in any different course.

WALTHALL CRITICISED

all the proposed remedies for the race trouble, including deportation and disfranchisement, as impracticable and impossible. Such colored men as Douglass, Bruce and Lynch, he said, were not types, but prodigies, but some Northern people, judging the whole negro race by them, did not appreciate the dread in which the Southern people stood of negro rule.

Walthall alluded to the practice of fraud and bribery at northern elections, and said if there was a show of force on the part of the white people to save themselves from negro rule, that was, at least, evidence of a more honest conviction than the buying of votes.

George spoke of the resolution as unparalleled in the history of the legislation of this country. He admitted the fact had been correctly stated by the Senator from Kansas the other day, perhaps with a little more coloring, and he had no hesitation in declaring that the transaction in the Fauness matter was such as demands from the Legislature of Mississippi an examination and a reparation to the victim thereof.

Chandler advocated the resolution. If the Senate was not only to be of this kind were committed by being asked, "What are you going to do about it?" but also was to be told by the Senator from Mississippi, "You have not the right to inquire and you dare not inquire into an outrage of this sort," then indeed had the Senate fallen to woeful and lamentable times.

Ingalls spoke forcibly on the matter, closing as follows: "It may be that you will succeed in procuring a declaration from the Senate of the United States that the government of the United States has no power either to inquire into wrongs against its citizens or to protect them against invasions of their rights, but I say to the Senator, if Fauness had been a citizen of Kansas, and should it appear that the authorities of Mississippi would not avenge that wrong and if it should appear that the government and authorities of the United States were powerless to prevent such a wrong, I will guarantee to him that the citizens of Kansas would take it into their hands to resent it and to exact reparation." (Murmurs of disapproval from the democratic side.)

George declined to put the senator from Kansas, or any senator on the republican side, to put his finger on that clause of the Constitution which authorized the federal government to punish or take jurisdiction of crimes committed within a State and not against the

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Spooner asked George if he doubted the power of the Senate to charge an appropriate committee with the power of investigating the Department of Justice and compelling the Attorney-General to produce any paper on file in his department.

George repeated his challenge.

Wilson of Iowa referred him to Section 2, Article 4, of the Constitution, in these words: "The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities as citizens of the several States."

Bergen condemned the outrage but denied the right of the Government of the United States to take jurisdiction. If sectional arbitration would cease and the people of the South were permitted to shape their course to the interests of the community, without having to guard themselves from the attacks from the outside, there would be fewer occasions for violations of the law.

George again took the floor and the resolution went over until tomorrow without action.

After executive session the Senate adjourned.

House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Mr. Lawler of Illinois presented a petition from the citizens of Chicago, protesting against the reimposition of duty on crockery, china and glassware packages.

Strait of Iowa introduced a bill for the appointment of a commissioner of immigration, also prohibiting the transporting of intoxicating liquors from one State or Territory to another State or Territory in violation of the laws thereof.

By Kelly of Kansas, to pension the widows and orphans of people killed for political purposes since the close of the late war.

By Burrows of Michigan, for the erection of a monument to Isabella of Spain.

McCreary offered a resolution congratulating the people of Brazil on the assumption of republicanism and recognizing the country by the United States as a free and independent republic, and instructing the President to give proper notice of his recognition to Brazil.

The House went into committee of the whole to consider the bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the erection of three United States prisons and for the imprisonment of United States prisoners. The amendment was adopted providing that there be such an arrangement in the construction of prison buildings that prisoners under 20 years of age should not be in any way associated with prisoners above that age. The committee rose, reported the bill to the House, and it was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill passed was made, and also one to lay this motion on the table. On the latter motion, no quorum voting, and Holman having raised the point, the House without further action adjourned.

Tragedy & Girl.

GAINESVILLE, Texas, Jan. 27.—Two young men, both farmers, named H. O. Blankenship and Sam Haggood, had a row this morning some miles south of Gainesville, about the affections of a young lady in the neighborhood. During the row Haggood seized a wagon neck-yoke and broke Blankenship's skull, fatally wounding him. Dillon, on whose farm the difficulty took place, came to the rescue of Blankenship, when Haggood dropped the neck-yoke and picked up a pitchfork with which he probably fatally wounded Dillon. He then made his escape.

THE APACHE INDIANS.

General Crook Said to Have Been Deceived.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Western dispatches charge General Crook with having been deceived by the Apache Indians now quartered in Alabama and Florida, who recently told him such tales of their suffering and want that he recommends to Washington officials that the redskins be removed to Fort Sill, Indian Territory. The western people are said to be all worked up over the contemplated transfer of Geronimo and his handful of followers.

General Crook said today: "I certainly would not form a plan to move the Apaches if there was any possibility of their turning like snakes upon the government. The Apaches are broken in spirit and humbled in the dust. Geronimo, once a great warrior, is a 'beap good injun.' He is leading a Sunday school class and, as I understand, has lost all hatred of the white people. These Indians would only be too glad to accept this removal as an opportunity to further their civilization and better their condition."

"But the people of Arizona bitterly denounce your scouts, especially Charlie, as traitors, and claim that they prolonged the subjugation of the Indians by revealing all your plans of action."

"That is false. These stories are being circulated for a purpose. On the contrary, if it had not been for Charlie and other Indian scouts the Indians would never have been induced to go to Florida. Lieutenant Gatewood and the Indian scouts met Geronimo and his chiefs and induced them to join their families, whom the government had sent to Fort Pickens, South Carolina. Then the Indians were trundled off to Alabama. General Miles did not accomplish anything with the white scouts. The Indian Territory is just the place for the Apaches, and I'll wager any amount that they will behave themselves there."

Murder in Arkansas.

NEWPORT, Ark. Jan. 27.—Sunday evening John Schreiber, the rejected suitor of Miss Fry, fatally shot that young lady and badly wounded her affianced husband. There may be a lynching.

A Saloon Robbed.

SEATTLE, Jan. 27.—This morning a young man, alone in a saloon with a faro dealer, made the latter give up, at the point of a revolver, $200. As he started to leave he was intercepted by the doorkeeper, Richards, whom he fatally shot. The robber escaped.

Epoch.
