STRONG ARGUMENTS FOR PROHIBITION

Editor Deserct News: I dosire to place myself on record with respect to the all important question of prohibi-tion now no prominently before the propile of our state. I am unequivo-cally and uncompromisingly in favor of prohibition. I want the word to go for the the world that the good peo-ple of our splendld state are not merely advocates of usial abstituence but that they carry the matter further and pro-plestil the manufacture and sale of the plosenous and soul-destroying h-quid; that they are above re-ceiving any revenue that is de-rived from the traffic in that which is responsible for the commis-sion of more murders and other crimes rived from the traffic is that which is responsible for the commis-sion of more murders and other crimes in an all other causes combined, to say nothing of the debauchery, misery, poverty, disease, cruelty, domestic here a shop, in which the govern-in intoxicating liquors is divectly trace-able. I have always believed that the greatest labay and achievement of a man or wann's life would be to save the sould of the children of men women in took at in their power to remove to find the weak. As with the indi-version of outinon and to respect the spans of the children of men any find to respect the spans of the children of men any find to do all in their power to remove sound and the weak. As with the indi-version of outinon and to respect the spans of the children of men any should be to save in convoluced that in our state that young and the weak. As with the indi-version of outinon and to respect the spans of the should be be state. I an convinced that in our state the state to come to the resource and happing of their homes destroyed through the extra to come to the resource and happing the responsibility of the mate to any mean state to come to the resource and save the few. How much greater then is here preponsibility of the mate to all prome of states and children starved and all this by the sanction of the state? ASHAMED OF THE BUSINESS.

Usually a successful husinesse man i roud of his achievements in the work commerce; but who ever heard of a doon keeper being proud to ac newledge that he mad a fortune moviedge that he mad a fortune, reat or small, through that moduun-have in mind a friend who at ors-line owned a saloon. He was asissmed if his business and never renerred to it in my presence, except a pologetically, and when asked what business he fol-owed, he would reply, 'I keep a li-eased heaves,' thus throwing as much if the odium of his refarious business is possible on the government for tak-ag his money in the form of a heaves

nen. And since the business in ques-ion is but a partnership between the adividual and the government. It is out post that the latter should bear ts share of the odium which always but pust that the latter should bear its share of the odium which always attaches to the liquor traffic. Is it not high time that the government was going out of the business and, instead of bring a party to the degredation and distress of its citizens, that it use its powerful arm to protect and safeguard them, just as it is now doing in the matter of establishing investle courts, see, for the protection and betterment of the young. It has always seemed theometics men and women are taken from the streets in a state of inter-cation, hauled before a justles and condemned to pay a fine or be incar-cerated in a shop, in which the govern-ment is a partner, in that it exacts and receives its share of the profiles in the receives its share of the profiles in the receives its share of the profiles in the receives its share of the profiles in the God forbid: But, asido from the moral phase of this argument, the argument itself is untrue and de-captive. No doubt some persons will refuse to invest their money in the state when it is under prohibitory law, but for every one who will not havest on the state their money and make this state their home, because of the protection that prohibitor will be to here homes, their children and their own passes and happineas. ## R. W. KATZ CHAMPIONS CAUSE OF THE SALOONS

Editor Descret News: While their are at the present time over 30 states actually whole or in part under lawful prohibition, the evidence regarding the virtues and benefits accruing to these states, it would appear, should be so nomentous as to overwhelm all op-ponents; but such is not the case.
